"Let each man exercise the art he knows best."
—ARISTOPHANES

Every musician, every singer, every dancer and actor, whether performing solo or ensemble, is to be individually thanked. Thanked for dreaming of moments when they can stand before you to entertain, enlighten, and amuse. Thanked for their time sacrificed to hone their skills. Thanked for seeking the arts as their form of expression.

We're all better for their efforts. James V. Zizzi understands labors of love, and his homes stand before you as testament. Which is why James V. Zizzi Contracting is a proud supporter of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.

Grab your fishing pole and let's go fishing. If a bad day fishing is better than a good day at work, then a good day fishing at home is the BEST! The Angler's Quest fishing simulator comes straight from the video arcade to your home game room.

Five fish species to choose from:
Bass, Dorado, Salmon,
Sailfish, and Trout.
Feels just like you're catching the real thing.
The expectation builds as you cast your line out.
The fish nails the bait.
You set the hook and the fish runs.
Line spins off the reel.
You begin working the fish back to your boat.
You've never been fishing like this.
Its great fun for friends.
The Angler's Quest fishing simulator comes with everything including sturdy arcade quality cabinet, huge 33 inch video monitor, safety netting, decorative waves, control console, rod holder and a high quality fishing rod and reel.

ASK GAEL

I'm in the Hamptons and need a reality check.

Crank down a few decibels with lunch at The Fish Farm. Get Marie Valenti to dish up her marvelous, peppery swordfish chili (a pint is perfect for two) and a couple of honest lobster rolls, barely mayo'd and sporting a big chunk of tail meat on top. Coleslaw is a must. Potato puree and just a dab of cream thicken the New England clam chowder and the lobster bisque. Marie cooks salmon farmed or wild, served with local corn. A crab cake on a bun is skinny but full of crabmeat. Husband Bob does the Key-lime tart. Thirty years ago, the Valentis came here to raise pan-size striped bass. "But no one was eating whole fish back then," she says. They switched to stocking local lobsters and fish, then started cooking eight years ago. Pick up to go, or settle at an umbrella'd picnic table overlooking the water. BYOB if you wish. You'll forget you ever heard of the Hamptons. Noon to 7:30.

The most beautiful homes in Manhattan, The Hamptons, and Palm Beach have one thing in common. Us.

And because we do one thing, and one thing only, we do it very well. In fact, when it comes to securing mortgages, people say we're the best. We'll get you the perfect mortgage. You may only need us once or twice in a lifetime. But when you do, we'll be there. Call us. You'll see. There's a lot more to mortgages than just numbers.

Audra McDonald

Benefit Concert

On behalf of the Myositis Association
Co-Chaired by Karen and Roger Stevens

Audra McDonald is a pitch perfect songstress, recording artist and actress, who has been compared to a young Barbara Streisand and Judy Garland. This four-time Tony Award winner has a fanatical following and her New York concerts are the toughest tickets on Broadway. Her vocal tone is clear as a bell and her ability to use it, incredible. She is a pure performer "stunning, engaging, witty, and passionate," according to the Washington Post, "there is no smarter or more expressive singer to be heard anywhere."

Duboeuf's First Prize Label Beaujolais & Maconnais

All of the delicious reds of Beaujolais and crisp, delightful Macon Chardonnays listed here feature the First Prize Label indicating that each wine has won first place at the prestigious, annual Villefranche and Macon wine fairs. Monsieur Duboeuf selected these first prize-winning cuvees specially for Sherry-Lehmann.

2003 First Prize Winning Label Chardonnays	SALE BOTTLE	SALE CASE
BEAUJOLAIS BLANC 2003	9.49	113.88
First Prize Here is a fresh, dry, crisp and delicious Chardonnay with ripe, tropical fruit flavors and honey nuances. (4430)
MACON-VILLAGES 2003	8.95	107.40
First Prize Fresh and bright with delicious, tropical fruit and crisp acidity, this wine is a crowd-pleaser. (4438)
POUILLY-FUISSE 2003	15.95	191.40
First Prize This will captivate with aromas of white flowers and honeysuckle, followed by flavors of apricots. (4530)
ST. VERAN 2003	10.95	131.40
One of our most popular wines, this Chardonnay has a golden honey nose with tropical fruit flavors and a full body. (4535)

DUBOEUF'S CHARDONNAY SAMPLER - $134.95
Twelve Bottles - Consists of 3 bottles each of the 4 whites listed here. (6608)

2003 First Prize Winning Label Reds	SALE BOTTLE	SALE CASE
BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 2003	7.95	95.40
First Prize "Dark, ripe and juicy, with a fleshy core of black cherry and plum fruit. Lots of sweet spice and smoke notes too, with another blast of fruit on the finish." -Wine Spectator (4412)
BROUILLY 2003	11.95	143.40
First Prize "Fruity, with ripe plums, blueberries and blackberries, like fresh juice running down your chin." -Wall Street Journal (4437)
CHENAS 2003	9.95	119.40
First Prize Ruby with a hint of garnet, this is a full-bodied, powerful and spicy wine. Yet the bouquet brims with delicate rose scents. (4505)
CHIROUBLES 2003	10.95	131.40
First Prize "This is always our favorite. It's like fresh-squeezed, black-purple juice, a little smoky and vibrant. This is a life-affirming wine." -Wall Street Journal (4508)

2003 First Prize Winning Label Reds	SALE BOTTLE	SALE CASE
COTE DE BROUILLY 2003	10.49	125.88
First Prize "...red and black cherry fruit, floral notes and a hint of mocha on the finish. Should open up nicely with brief cellaring." -Wine Spectator (4525)
FLEURIE 2003	11.95	143.40
First Prize "Smooth and slightly rich, an easygoing kind of wine that fans of Merlot would love for its smoothness. But there's a little touch of black pepper that gives it grounding to pair with food." -Wall Street Journal (4531)
JULIENAS 2003	10.49	125.88
First Prize The clay soil is favorable for the production of rich, powerful and robust wines of Julienas. This 2003 is ruby red, with peach and raspberry flavors. (4406)
MORGON 2003	10.95	131.40
First Prize The 2003 Morgon shows the super ripeness of the 2003 vintage; bursting with raspberry, blueberry and cassis fruit, it is a big mouthful of Gamay pleasure. (4407)
MOULIN-A-VENT 2003	11.95	143.40
First Prize "This is the big daddy, the biggest and hardest Beaujolais, real wine meant for real food...Spicy and earthy and still a bit young and aggressive." -Wall Street Journal (4532)
REGNIE 2003	8.95	107.40
First Prize "Moving towards the serious side:..Not only is this wine blue-tinged, but it tastes blue-tinged, almost like roasted lilacs. This wine's weight and density remind us of a Rhone wine." -Wall Street Journal (4505)
ST. AMOUR 2003	11.95	143.40
First Prize An engaging, delicate wine that offers delicious flavors of peach, raspberry, blueberry and cassis. (4413)

■ "A wine aficionado's paradise," this legendary Madison Avenue purveyor, once again the Survey's No.1 store in its category, is lauded for its "deep, deep selection" that while "strongest in high-end Bordeaux" (find "that double magnum of '82 Lafite-Rothschild") is "comprehensive" in all regions and price points, including nearly 400 options under $10; rest assured, "even if you don't look rich and want an inexpensive bottle of Beaujolais," the staff will be "helpful," but if you can't stop by, or are frustrated that only a "fraction of the bottles are on display," they "have a great Web site" and catalog, both of which include lots of accessories.

Cause & Effect

How the Building of Swimming Pools Transformed the Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

It wasn't so long ago that I lived in this nice rustic house out here with a view of Three Mile Harbor. I lived on a hillside. The kids used it for sleigh riding in the wintertime. They'd zip down, screaming, and there was one part where there was a hump that you could hit and leap off into the air before coming down with a big bang. In the summer, I'd mow where the hill leveled out and there was this flat part of the hill by the kitchen and we would set up a croquet game. Sometimes we'd buy charcoal and barbecue.

Then came the swimming pool. I have since come to view the arrival of the swimming pool as the opening of a fissure in the earth, and the appearance, after the emission of hot gases, of jagged cracks emanating out in every direction, swallowing everything up in its path, until, well, until it took over my life.

This is not about money. It's about water pollution. Yes, it is true the pool is a completely self-contained unit and the water is constantly recycled so that it never spills out and never by itself affects the environment. But then there is what happens around the pool.

At first, I had some reservations about digging a hole and putting in a swimming pool. What would happen to the sleigh riding?

We've had enough sleigh riding, the kids said. And it's not a big sleigh-riding hill anyway. Quail Hill where all our friends go is much bigger. We want a swimming pool.

And so, with much reluctance, I got the permits and built one. A little one. Sixteen by thirty two. The smallest regulation pool you could build. I recall the building department inspectors asking me, when I filed the plans, what I intended to do around the coping. I didn't know anything about coping.

"If you don't put anything around the coping," the building inspector said, "people will track dirt into the pool. And mud into the house."

> The landscaper assured me that she didn't have a degree in landscape architecture for nothing

I didn't know it at the time, but this was the beginning of the end.

The pool opened for business in the summer of 2000. It was terrific. Sparkling water. People splashing. Inflatable pool equipment. Around the coping, between the kitchen and the pool, I installed bricks so people could walk back and forth between the two places in a civilized, carefree, un-dirtlike manner.

But on the other side of the pool, now I noticed things looked sort of shabby. There was underbrush there, vines and sticker bushes. It would be so much better to look out from the kitchen and look across the new pool and see something beautiful. Maybe a garden. Maybe some sculptured hedges. So I put that in.

Then I noticed the house on the side of the kitchen needed work. The cedar shingles were old. One was pulled out. That side of the house looked crummy. So I had the whole side of the house re-shingled.

But when that was done, I saw you couldn't just shingle one side of the house. You had to shingle the whole house. And when I got done with that, I saw the roof looked kind of ratty. It was old and in some places had mold on it. I put in a new roof.

Behind the pool, going up the hill, I saw that, on rainy days, some of the topsoil where it was patchy was trickling down. If that kept up, some of it would get into the pool. I had a new lawn put in on the hillside, and a low retaining wall built out of railroad ties. That stopped it. And you could sit on the retaining wall. But people, sitting there, couldn't face one another. You needed lawn furniture. So I got some at a yard sale. But when I set it up I saw that it was used and shabby. I went back out, this time to a furniture store, and bought some brand new chaise lounges and chairs brought to America direct from the showroom of an award winning Italian furniture designer. I also fertilized the hillside, sprinkled Lawn Gro on it and set up hose sprinklers to be sure the trickle down didn't come back. It worked.

Now I put in sod on the far side of the pool

Then he moves on to Asia for a "Band of Brothers"-like mini-series about American troops battling the Japanese in the Pacific during World War II. Also in development is an Abraham Lincoln project, which, most likely, will have something to do with the Civil War. And, it seems, Spielberg's long awaited movie about the assassination of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics may soon being filming in Europe.

The purchaser of the property, which was sold without a broker, remains a mystery.

between the coping and the garden. You didn't get out of the pool on that side, so that wasn't the problem. What was the problem was that when you watered the garden, you did so by walking along on the dirt path next to the coping, and so the dreaded dirt would stick to the soles of your feet. Couldn't have that.

Next we completely landscaped all the shrubbery around the house. Most of the indigenous stuff had to be pulled up, and it had sort of been there forever, so it made me kind of sad. But the landscaper assured me that she didn't have a degree in landscape architecture for nothing and I should trust her.

Slate walkways were now put in. Trellises appeared, festooned with vines and more flowers, some of them, I was told, from China and the Philippines, from Brazil, Java, Norway and the Sandwich Islands. It was really looking great, actually, except now the gravel driveway would have to go. Cars would rev their engines and stones would go flying everywhere, into the sod, up the new cedar steps to the front door. So I had the driveway redone in blacktop. Frankly, black really set off the big round sculptured green bushes that I had flanking the front door.

And so it has gone. Presently I am contemplating an underground lawn sprinkler system.

Before the arrival of the swimming pool, I got ready for summer by putting the sleds away, mowing the lawn, cutting back some of the creeper vines and putting bird food into the feeder. I also painted the bottom of my aluminum rowboat, which was upside down on the front lawn, pulled the old outboard engine out of the garage, took both of them across the street with the help of several friends, and set them up tied to a stake you could wade out to. Walking barefoot along the harbor bottom to get to the boat, you had to look out for crabs, eels, turtles, and dead fish. But sometimes, if you were lucky you could hit a clam with your toes, pick it up and later, crack it open and eat it with cocktail sauce. You could also go fishing right in the Harbor.

Frankly, back then, I worried about the paint I was putting on the bottom of the boat. It was bad for the environment, I was told. I would also sometimes find plastic cups or beer cans along the harbor beach when I put my boat in. We definitely needed to watch the environment.

Today, I still live in this house overlooking Three Mile Harbor. The Harbor hasn't changed, but my house has. It looks like something from Great Neck. To get ready for summer, I call the landscaper who comes with Lawn Gro and weed killer. I call the exterminator who gets rid of the carpenter bees and the mice, I buy flea and tick spray for the dogs, throw Daminex around the borders of the property to kill the ticks, call the pool people who come with chlorine, ph plus and shock, call the yard clean up people who rake up and haul away the cuttings down to even the tiniest leaf that might land on my lawn. And I call the boatyard, where I have a newer boat that, at 19 feet, is too heavy to just carry across the street, and so has to be stored for the winter under plastic bubble wrap. That protects the seat cushions. The marina also paints the bottom (with environmentally approved paint, thank you very much), puts my boat in the water at a slip at a floating dock that I had to wait on line for four years to get. I also call the air conditioning people who service the air conditioning and I hook up the bug zapper which has been stored in the garage. It makes a nice, happy sizzling sound when it catches anything. Also, the boat goes 45 miles an hour.

So now I sit in my carefully clipped, sanitized, groomed and fluffed poolside garden drinking bottled water and I wait for my cell phone to ring with a phone call from a fashion magazine. I sit on a cushioned designer chair and, on my laptop write articles about how people want to put herbicides into the ponds and harbors to somehow control the wild algae thriving happily on trickle down Lawn Gro that has never been fed to them before. These new herbivores are choking the indigenous plants that we have out here. And sometimes, when it gets really thick, the water turns brown and you can't even swim in it all summer.

They call it the Red Tide. And it's a problem.

Wait. A bird just swooped down and crossed the pool. Probably looking for that old messy birdfeeder I used to use. Shoo. Shoo. •

Don Quixote

30-Foot Statue to Lead the Parade Down the Beach Saturday

By Dan Rattiner

This Saturday morning, beginning at 11 a.m. and ending about 1 in the afternoon, out on the sand along the way between Georgica Beach and Beach Hampton, you will be able to witness the glorious triumph of the forces of good and all that is right with the world, or the forces of selfishness, regulation and bureaucracy, in which case you will see nothing. How it works out will really say a lot about our local authorities and how they view the world. We hope for the best, for the sake of two well-known people in this community now in love.

The lovers are Frazer Dougherty, the founder of LTV, and Eleanor Leonard, the founder of the Hamptons Music Festival. Of course, as mature people, they speak euphemistically. "You know Frazer and I are now together," Eleanor told me. They are together at Eleanor's beachfront house in Amagansett. Frazer's beachfront house in Georgica is being sold. And herein hangs this tale.

There was a time, and this is hard to believe, when here in America, people cared more about ideas than they do today. I know this is a sort of an insult to what is going on today, and I do fear for the freedoms we all hold dear in a society more interested in JLo and Ben than Socialism or Fascism, but that is another story.

The point is that Frazer's move into Eleanor's house is resulting in the need to migrate a thirty-foot stainless steel sculpture of Don Quixote atop his horse — spear extended — from the former to the latter. It was originally put there as a kind of protest, which I will get to later. In any case, invitations have gone out. The move will begin at 11 a.m. on Saturday morning when workmen hoist the statue by crane up onto the back of a flatbed truck from the side yard of the 100-year-old cedar shingled home of Frazer Dougherty, (originally built by the actor John Drew). Once on board, Don Quixote will be slowly and gently driven down to the water's edge and, accompanied by friends, family, musicians, caterers serving hors d'oeuvres, and other interested people, turned to the east and driven to Amagansett. The muscial Man of La Mancha, written by Dale Wasserman with lyrics by Joe Darion, will be performed along the way. Also along the way there will be well-wishers and beach goers, children and volleyball players, surfcasters and surfers, friends and neighbors and those who do not know either Eleanor or Frazer.

This will be Saturday morning. Don Quixote will pass along the beach from west to east, in front of the pavilion at Main Beach, Wyborg's Beach, Two Mile Hollow Beach, past the oceanfront homes of Ron Lauder, Kelly Klein, Marty Zweig, Jerry Seinfeld, Carl Icahn and others, then in Amagansett in front of Indian Wells Beach and Atlantic Beach and finally to its final destination, the side lawn of the modern glass and wood mansion of Eleanor Leonard, beachfront on Shore Road in Napeague.

Don Quixote will have traveled six miles. He may not have traveled as far as he did in Cervantes' book. But the question of whether he will encounter as many obstacles will depend on the attitude of the authorities.

When I first unrolled the scroll-like invitation to this affair, I thought to myself please, please, please be after 6 p.m. Vehicles are allowed on the beach after 6 pm. But no. It is 11 a.m. on Saturday, two weekends before the Fourth of July. Eleanor and Frazer want everybody in on the fun.

In the Spirit of the Fourth of July, I hope the authorities will let them. They would be within their rights not to. I recall the story about the Chief of Police of Charleston, South Carolina. It took place in the 1970s, during the age of upheaval and change in this country. One day, the authorities received a notification from the Ku Klux Klan that they would parade through the center of downtown Charleston. The Mayor and the Board were totally against it, and they had the right to refuse it by denying a permit for it. Into the meeting came the Chief of Police, an extraordinary figure in town in that era, remembered fondly today, who is a black man. He listened to the conversation by the Mayor and the Board and he said let them parade. I will lead it. And he did.

Frazer and Eleanor may also have a legal right, by the way, to bring their thirty-foot sculpture down the beach to Eleanor's house. They are both residents of the Town of East Hampton. And, according to the law, they both have the right to traverse the beach, certainly on foot, from one end to the other, including the Village. All residents of East Hampton have that right. Surely they have the right also to take one of their possessions with them.

As for the sculpture, it should be said that it is already on the beach. The old house built by John Drew in 1915 is probably located closer to the sea than the law would allow today, but it is grandfathered in. So it is legal. And the sculpture is there on the beach, too. Perhaps it could be said that those who would move it are only looking for a good place to take it OFF the beach, much as the authorities looked for the place to get the carcass of the 6,000 pound whale that came up on the beach this winter, off. (They buried the whale.)

There is one other reason to make an exception to allow the sculpture to be carted down the beach. And that is — just for the fun of it. Don Quixote on the move is an event worthy of the surprise and joy it will bring to those who see it.

Well, I do not know if Eleanor and Frazer have already gotten a permit from the Village. Maybe they have. I am afraid to ask them because I don't want to throw cold water on their parade. And I am afraid to ask the Town or the Village because perhaps it is intended to be a surprise. I wouldn't want to give it away. Perhaps the best thing here, if the Mayor and the Town Supervisor agree with all of this (and perhaps they are first reading about it here), is this: You never read anything. I made this up. The thing will never happen. Some very selfish curmudgeon-like people will call the police to tell them about it that morning and sound the alarm. The police will be slow to react. They will always be one step behind. (Or one step ahead.) But they will finally catch up and issue a ticket after it is all over.

That will be the best way to go.

Anyway, it is going to happen, or try to happen, and the only question probably remaining for you, dear reader, is why it is happening. So here it is.

About twenty five years ago, still in the age of protests and ideas but coming toward the end of it, Frazer Dougherty lived in the John Drew house with his late wife Frances Anne Dougherty. Next door, there lived a prominent millionaire in the media business.

At the time, there was no cable service on Drew Lane in East Hampton, and so this millionaire, anxious to stay in close touch with his holdings, which included several media properties, put up a satellite on his property.

Satellites back then were not little things that you put on your roof. They were big things. And what this man did at the time was put the mother of all satellites, approximately twenty feet in diameter, on the side of his property facing the home of the Doughertys. This satellite greatly obstructed the view from the Doughertys. And they objected. But the millionaire did nothing. So the Doughertys took the matter into their own hands. At considerable expense, they commissioned Bill King, a prominent local sculptor, to build them a thirty-foot-tall Don Quixote of tubular steel. He did. When it arrived on a flatbed truck at their home, the Dougherty's placed it directly next to the satellite dish, on the Dougherty-owned property, but facing the satellite dish, as in the story, this deluded knight faced the windmill.

What this did to the reception, I do not know. But the millionaire got the message. He took down the satellite. And that was that. Except that the Doughertys kept the Don Quixote, a valuable piece of art, up, apparently with the agreement of the millionaire who said it would be all right with him.

End of story. Almost. Now Frazer Dougherty, many years after the passing of his wife, moves into the home of Eleanor Leonard. And he sells his house. The closing is coming up in a week or two. And no, thank you very much, we have our own stuff. We'd be pleased if you would remove the sculpture. •

As we go to press, we learn that the Mayor of East Hampton has met with Frazer and Eleanor and has persuaded them to hold this march down the beach, not at 11 a.m., but at 6 p.m. It will be near sunset. Cocktail hour. It will work perfectly. In other words, the Mayor wimped out. And Frazer and Eleanor have agreed to this time change. See you at 6. –DR

NY State Knows Best

State Proposes Taking Over Beach Driving Decisions Here

By Dan Rattiner

On Friday afternoon about 1 p.m. I drove down Napeague to a secret place I know, halfway to Montauk, where you can drive on an old dirt Trustee road, and, if you have a four wheel drive beach driving sticker, emerge from between two sand dunes to drive onto the beach. Few people know about this particular spot, and I am not going to tell you where it is. But it is perfect for watching the ocean, surfcasting and having a beach picnic. My purpose, almost always, for being there, is to type up that day's story for this newspaper, far away from the hustle of the rest of the Hamptons. I usually do this five times a week. Me, my dog, and my trusty Hewlett Packard Omnibook 300 Laptop computer.

Over the years, much of the ocean beaches here have been saved from development. Involved in the effort are the Towns, the County, the State and the Federal Government, each ponying up some money to make the save, and each rightfully claiming their own particular stretch of beach for their constituency. They each have their own particular rules. And for each, I am, therefore, obliged to purchase a different beach sticker, some of which affix to the mirror, others of which affix to the front bumper, the back bumper or the back driver's side rear door window. It's a job. But each year I festoon my car with them, in case I might drive from one jurisdiction to another. I'm ready.

Night Fishing: Rear View

On the other hand, there was one beach sticker this year that I forgot to get. Actually, it's almost not worth getting. You can only get one either in Montauk or Captree or Babylon. It is for a stretch that occupies no more than 2000 yards along the twelve-mile stretch of the Napeague beach, and it is owned by the State. You go out the Trustee Road, and you are on it, right when you come through the dunes. You generally drive along the beach quickly so you can get into the vacant beach the town owns on each side, because the State sticker is the most expensive of all — $49 — and because the things that are prohibited even with the sticker are great in number.

THE STRANGE & WILD DEVILS OF TASMANIA

By Dan Rattiner

I recently read about an animal called a Tasmanian Devil that lives on a small island off the southern coast of Australia, and nowhere else. The story was about how they are being attacked by a severe and unknown viral disease. I was not so interested in the disease as I was with the Devil itself. I did some further research on it, and so here is a description of the habits, attributes and personality of this most unusual animal. There is absolutely no reason why this is in Dan's Papers, except I thought you might find it interesting.

Tasmanian devils weigh about twelve pounds, look something like a bear, and have big heads and small hindquarters. The heads feature bulging wide set eyes, snouts with pinkish noses and huge mouths they can open to an enormous size to reveal great jagged teeth. Their fur is blue-black with white patches on the tops of their heads and on the bottom of their rumps. The females have backward opening pouches, like kangaroo pouches, where they keep their young. When members of either sex get angry, the inside of their ears, which are normally white, turn red. And when they get stressed or frightened, they open their mouths wide and make hissing noises like a snake. They also, at those times, emit a bad odor.

I have never seen a State police officer on this beach either patrolling it or giving out tickets in all the years I have been driving out the Trustee Road. It is just a little one mile patch and the State owns a whole lot of other facilities in Montauk. But this past Friday, when I came down the road and got to the dune, there was a state trooper, in full uniform, revolver on his hip, standing on the sand by his four by four State Police Car with the flashing lights. He waved me to come over toward him. And I complied. And he gave me a ticket for not having a sticker.

The only argument I could make to him that made any sense was that he had lured me out onto the State beach by asking me to come to him, and that was entrapment. He said the Trustee Road was in the State Park, which it was, and I argued that the Dongan Patent, which was created for the Freeholders and Citizens of East Hampton in 1683 to see to it they had a passage out to the beach on the Trustee Roads, overrode that. He wasn't buying it.

I left the beach with my ticket, somewhat shaken. I still could get a beach sticker if I wanted to. Although as I said there were many rules and regulations that applied on the State beach that did not apply on any other of our local beaches.

But before I got up to the Montauk Downs State Golf Club, where the stickers might be available, I stopped in downtown Montauk and picked up a Newsday. I also picked up a brochure at the Chamber of Commerce office explaining the requirements for a State sticker. Then I stopped off at Nick's Restaurant on South Emerson Street, right on the beach overlooking the sea, and had a lobster roll while I read what I had bought. I read the Newsday first.

There was an alarming article in the front section of that paper entitled QUESTIONS OF TURF ON LI SURF. Apparently, a State Assemblyman in Westchester, a Richard Brodsky, had introduced a bill that would turn going out on the beach to fish or write on a laptop or have a picnic on its head.

"Brodsky has introduced a bill that would prohibit motor vehicle access to beaches considered 'Coastal erosion hazard areas' if the municipality cannot show that going out on the beach is consistent with protecting the public health and safety of surrounding property. Brodsky said the standards would be determined beach by beach. If the current system of (county, town and village) permits is assessed and considered sufficient, nothing would be changed. 'It's not my job to tell them how to handle any beach,' Brodsky said of the towns. 'Nothing in this bill makes anyone's life difficult.'"

In other words, if the laws governing town beaches or village beaches or county beaches are deemed not okay by the state, then the State could close down the access to them.

Amazing.

Right then and there, from the restaurant table, I called the Trustees office where a secretary referred me to the Trustee Attorney, John Courtney. He said he never heard of this proposal. So I read it to him.

"I didn't think they had any beaches up in Hartsdale," Mr. Courtney said, referring to Brodsky's district.

"They don't."

"Well, I think the Trustees might have something to say about this," he said.

The Trustees, whose grant was issued by the King of England and affirmed by the Federal Government, have been challenged before but never defeated. A recent effort by Southampton Village to shut down beach access designated for the residents by the Trustees was withdrawn. There is a local bayman, Stewart Vorpahl of East Hampton, who three times in the last fifteen years has, while fishing, been given a summons by the State of New York for not having a state fishing permit. For all these years he has motored around on his boat with a copy of the Dongan Patent wrapped in plastic thumbtacked to the cockpit, saying that is his license. The State has taken him to court all three times, but each time withdrawn the charges before a jury could rule one way or another.

I told the attorney that when I got home, I would fax him a copy of the article if he wanted, but he said he'd send somebody out to find a Newsday, and call me if he didn't have any luck.

Then I looked at the brochure about four-wheel drive beach driving from the State. It's ten pages long and includes rules and regulations galore. Permits are issued to bona fide

Nazi Landings I

A Lesson in the Loss of Rights for Terrorists on the East End

By Dan Rattiner

I have been working on an article about the time that four Nazi terrorists landed by submarine on the beach in Amagansett in the middle of the night during the Second World War. They came laden with explosives and were bent on blowing up rail junctions, chemical plants, dams, aluminum factories and department stores owned by Jews. You will read about this next week in Dan's Papers.

One of the more amazing things about this story is what happened after they were caught. Although two of the four Germans were American citizens who had traveled back to Berlin to work for Hitler during his early years, and although they were captured here in America before they could perform any terrorist acts, President Roosevelt denied them a civil trial.

"I want to make one thing perfectly clear," he told his Secretary of State Henry Stimson. "If a Federal Marshal comes here with a writ of habeas corpus, I will not release these prisoners to him."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the ultimate liberal Democrat, wanted them to have only a military trial. And he already knew the outcome. He wanted them put to death.

Shortly before the trial began, Roosevelt went on national radio to issue a proclamation. He said that anybody coming to America from foreign shores to cause chaos and harm to the American people or its property, no matter who they were, would automatically lose all rights to any civil trial.

During the military trial, the lawyer the military appointed to defend the Germans appealed this proclamation to the Supreme Court, which at the time was off on summer vacation. They were re-assembled for one day, heard the case, and ruled in favor of the President. You will read in Dan's Papers in detail the final fate of these terrorists next week.

As I am researching this story, I am sharply

PENCIL PUSHERS SAY FISH CAN'T GO OUT TO SEA

By David Lion Rattiner

One fish, two fish, 5,000 dead fish? That's not the way the poem goes, but that's the way it went at the Multi-Aquaculture Systems facility on a stretch of beach in Amagansett known as the Promised Land. The facility, which basically is licensed to breed fish, raise the young, and then throw them in the ocean has been having a problem. The problem is government paperwork. This spring they were unable to get an approval to throw the young flounder, who were quite ready, into the ocean. As a result, almost 20% of their 30,000 fish died in their tanks.

Apparently, the job of the State Department of Fish in Albany is such a challenging and difficult one, such as signing a piece of paper saying that it is okay to release the fish, that they were unable to get their act together.

So one has to wonder, what the heck does the State Department have to approve so that Aquaculture Systems can get these fish into the water? Well, there are some extremely important things that need to be carefully checked so that the flounder population does not hurt the environment. Here they are.

One is to make sure that the flounder are of correct genetic origin. After all, we can't have Italian flounder mating with Japanese flounder can we? What language would these fish speak? How would they be able to understand their history? Just because the flounder are in American waters does not mean that they speak English. Flounder, as we all know, do not have the ability to understand more than one language. Interracial mating with fish causes far more problems in the fishing world than one can imagine. George Geyser, at the State Department of Genetic Purity had this to say, "We are just trying to prevent familial battles between fish. With humans you have a couple aware of items in the news. People are investigating how the American military is abusing prisoners at Guantanamo. The rock group Motley Crue has filed a law suit against NBC, claiming that NBC has banned them from their airways ever since, two months ago, one of their band members uttered an expletive during a live performance on one of their shows. President Bush has said that Americans will "take action" if North Korea conducts a nuclear test. The Russians have said they will join with the Americans in that event.

Back in 1942, President Roosevelt ordered a total blackout of the news about the Nazi landings. He would give the order when the blackout would end. The newspapers complied. In fact, newspaper stories already had to pass a censor. And America had been at war for just seven months at the time.

I recall that after 9/11, people said that America would never be the same. We had been attacked even worse than we had been attacked at Pearl Harbor. This was war and many freedoms would have to be rescinded.

Well, you know what? They have been. But it's been so carefully done that we haven't noticed. And many people, particularly the Democrats, seem to think that President Bush is to blame for all of this. We have body searches at airports, we have information being given out to the FBI about private citizens. I read yesterday that even FedEx is reporting any unusual package routings to the FBI, and including Social Security Numbers.

We were attacked ruthlessly and our President has made the decision to return the favor in kind. It is surely not a popular decision, but until this ragtag enemy gets up and says they've had enough and agrees to stop attacking us, it will probably continue. There was an eavesdrop conversation released two weeks ago, a tape of Osama bin Laden talking to Abu Musab al-Zarqawi congratulating him on the beheadings and urging him to blow more things up, particularly back in America. Haven't had much going on there recently.

Now, this week, al-Zarqawi is gravely ill from a bullet wound and may not be able to continue. We got him.

Also this past week there were photographs in the newspaper of Saddam Hussein, in his prison cell in Baghdad wearing nothing but some underpants. These photographs first appeared in the Sun in London, one of those sensational Murdoch publications. And the editor was now being asked to apologize for having run them. Hussein had been the ruler of a nation, after all.

"Here is a man who has murdered at least 500,000 people, and I'm supposed to apologize because I published pictures of him in his underpants?" the editor said. He would not apologize.

The Democrats have been running around trying to figure out how to reorganize themselves so they can win elections. They want more for the poor, they want to save the forests, they want peace and justice and they want those people who made fun of the Iraqi prisoners by leading them around with a leash to be punished. What kind of barbarians have we Americans become?

It seems to me, we have become what Americans became back in the early 1940s when we were attacked. After four years, we won the war and it ended. After that we went back to being a people with the finest, most liberal, most caring government on the planet.

Whatever is being done right now to defend our nation — and that is the first obligation of any President we've ever had — is to end this challenge as quickly as possible. And that will be the end of it.

"That's not the America I know," President Bush said when he read that prisoners were being led around on leashes.

I think it would be a good thing if our government, both Democratic and Republican, would use the phrase "temporary war measure" as was done during the Second World War all those years ago when putting into effect measures that limited our rights.

I think it would put a perspective on the things that are going on just now, and in particular, since doing this would indicate all this is temporary, it would get the Democratic party refocused enough to stop blaming the right wing Republicans for the terrorist attacks we've endured. Then perhaps they could come up with an agenda that wouldn't turn off ordinary people. •

Amazing Hurricane Photos at Southampton Museum

By David Stoll

Between 1900 and 2000, New York State was directly hit by a hurricane only nine times, and of those only five were considered "major", which means category 3 or higher. The last major hurricane to hit New York was Gloria in 1985. That hurricane was ranked as the 16th in intensity among Atlantic hurricanes to hit the U.S. mainland, which makes it a more intense hurricane that the one that hit the Hamptons in 1938. That hurricane ranks 22nd in intensity, but the damage it caused is forever etched in the consciousness of those who witnessed it. The Southampton Historical Museum is now presenting a terrific exhibit about the hurricane, which helps make sure the damage is etched in the consciousness of later generations.

Extraordinarily, the exhibit is composed mostly of photographs taken during the days immediately after the hurricane. These pictures are awesome, in the non-colloquial sense of the word. Beachfront mansions have their foundations ripped out. A piano sits on a front lawn. An enormous inlet between the ocean and Lake Agawam has been created. Meadow Lane, Gin Lane and Main Street are covered with debris and wrecked houses and stores. The Water Mill windmill's rotors are in pieces. And the gorgeous St. Andrew's Dune Church is devastated. Amazingly, the Church was restored — even some of the stained glass was recovered and used again.

The destruction is truly amazing, and shows how far we have come in hurricane preparedness. I happened to be on Martha's Vineyard in 1991 when Hurricane Bob hit the island directly. After it passed through, we walked around to see trees pulled up through concrete sidewalk slabs and boats flung completely out of the harbors. But most of the houses and stores were intact. I do not recall seeing or reading about anything like the St. Andrew's Dune Church, for example. The haunting pictures of the devastation caused by the Hurricane of 1938 seem almost otherworldly in comparison.

Also included in the exhibit are news stories covering the hurricane, describing the destruction, deaths and the way the various village boards galvanized to clean up and repair the Hamptons. One particularly fascinating tidbit is that the Village of Southampton refused to take federal disaster relief money, deciding to continue its 300-year tradition, as the Village Board then put it, of doing just fine on its own.

This was my first visit to the Southampton Historical Museum, which is located on Meeting House Road just east of Main Street in the marvelous 1843 Captain Albert Rogers mansion. Some of the mansion's rooms are used for reproductions of how people lived at the time, including a fascinating maid's room. Other rooms contain local antique furniture and place settings. Pictures from different time periods adorn many of the walls. And there are frequently changing special exhibits, like the Hurricane of 1938 exhibit, which runs until July 10.

The museum also leads historic architectural walking tours, and even the beautiful property itself contains various buildings of historical interest, such as a one-room school and other post-Civil War era commercial shops. The museum is very much worth a visit. And with an above-average hurricane season being predicted, perhaps you will want to go right away.

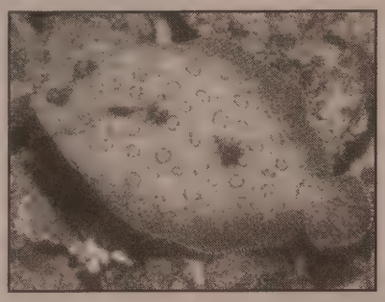
of arguments here and there, maybe people don't show up to the wedding. With fish however, there is chaos, hatred, and in the worst of cases, murder."



Mr. Geyser is referring to the incredible massacre back in 1996 when a fish farming facility allowed North Korean fighting fish to mate with South Korean fighting fish. The North and South Korean fish families became so enraged that they began brutal killings of one another for two years. The most common form of murder was a gang attack by the North fish on the children of the South fish while they were on their way to school. It was brutal. Obviously, checking to make sure that the fish are bred from a native stock here at the Aquaculture System facility on Long Island is of utmost importance.

The state also checks to make sure each fish is given a nametag so they can identify the fish in the future. This way, should the fish ever commit a crime, the State Department has their tag number on file and can more easily determine what kind of penalty needs to be enacted.

Last Tuesday, however, the State Department got to the fish factory, made their rounds, made their notes, made the employees of Aquaculture Systems feel about as big as a peanut, said don't call us, we'll call you, and then went on their way.

Hopefully, before all the rest of the flounder die, the State Department will sign on the dotted line. When that happens, the flounder will be released into the ocean, and be free to do whatever they want. They can play in the water, play hide and seek with predators and of course live out their dream. The dream of every one of Long Island's fish, to be caught by a fisherman, be beaten to death, and be eaten by a millionaire.

fishermen only. All persons 12 years and older must have fishing equipment (rods, reels, line, bait, hooks and lures) and are required to show same upon request. No dogs are allowed. (What fisherman doesn't have a dog?) Tires must not exceed either 33 inches in diameter or 12.5 inches in width. Before passing the Beach Vehicle checkpoint location (what checkpoint location?), all beach vehicle tires must be aired down to one-half the maximum rated tire pressure. Pedestrians have the right of way. Open fires, camping trailers, boats, flotation devices, inflatables, bathing, surfboards, personal watercraft, scuba diving (except divers with a valid diving permit), wind-surf/sail equipment, alcoholic beverages are PROHIBITED. (What the heck IS permitted?) Barbecues are permitted.

I looked up from my lobster roll. Here, a mile away from the busy Town Beach, the surfers were riding the waves. The State bureaucrats, I thought, ought to get a life. But there was more.

The required equipment on board the beach vehicle must include one set of fishing tackle for each person, a portable toilet, a tow rope, a jack, approved tires, a tire gauge, a spare tire, a shovel and on and on and on.

Before I went up to try to get a State permit for that 2000 yards, I guess I should get some fishing gear.

Incidentally, I hate fishing. I hate putting squirmy things that don't want to die on a hook. I hate the boredom of waiting and waiting and waiting. And I hate having to fight with a fish that is hooked, and only wants to get on with it to have a nice life just like the rest of us, to try to remove a hook which is designed to stay in there no matter how he fights, from his mouth. I also hate scaling, gutting, cleaning and boning a fish. After doing all that, I won't even EAT the fish. I want the fish I eat to have come wrapped in plastic from the supermarket. Or served to me on a tray by a courteous, young waiter or waitress in a restaurant.

Well, now I would have to be a fisherman.

I already had all the shovels and ropes and tire pressure gauges that were mentioned, because in addition to having town, village and county and federal stickers, I also am a member of the Long Island Beach Buggy Association (I

Sillerman Forced Out

Southampton College's Major Donor Talks About What Happened

By Alan Michael Braveman

Robert F.X. Sillerman told me that he was stunned last week when he received a phone call asking that he resign as both Chancellor of Southampton College and as a member of the Board of Trustees.

It is was an audacious request in light of the fact that Mr. Sillerman and his wife are the most successful fundraisers in the history of Southampton College, raising more than $12 million through the creation of the "All for the Sea Concerts," millions more in personal contributions from friends and through their own Tomorrow Foundation for the construction of Chancellor's Hall and the New Bishop-Burke Library and other College projects.

In addition to being tireless boosters for Southampton College the now "former" Chancellor and his wife had been successful in pushing the Southampton College Writers Conference into the national spotlight by helping to attract the stellar faculty and lecturers to make it the most sought after Conference of its kind. It boasts such great talent as Billy Collins, the Poet Laureate of the United States and other renowned authors. The John Steinbeck Project also received their special attention with the creation of the Steinbeck Writing Room in the Southampton College Library for aspiring writers.

Their style is personal, hands on and left no room to doubt their commitment to the college and higher education was genuine, heartfelt, sincere and passionate.

Perhaps it was this " passion" that caused him to be asked to resign. Bob Sillerman is by nature a passionate person about everything he becomes involved in. From acquiring the 85% interest in the Elvis Presley Enterprises, to controlling interest in 19 Entertainment, the English company that created the popular television program "American Idol" to his intense involvement in the music and entertainment business where in 1998 his company booked more then 25,000 musical events in one year bringing more than 50 million consumers into his venues. At the same time he was a "dollar a year man" at Southampton College and was extolled by the President of Long Island University, Dr. David Steinberg in May of 2001, as a man with " extraordinary vision and leadership who sparked a transformation that is establishing the College (Southampton) as a national institution. He (Bob Sillerman) has been a major force in the revitalization of the College."

> Exciting things were happening at Southampton College under Bob Sillerman's tutelage.

The Sillerman connection with Southampton began on a casual New Year's Eve in the mid 1970s when he first met Congressman Tim Bishop and his wife, Cathy, in Southampton through a college friend of his wife, Laura, named Carol Gilbert, who was employed at Southampton College, along with the other members of what would become a tight knit group of Southamptonites. Those included were the Bishops, Carol Gilbert, Robert and Alice Flynn and Vic and Jane Finalborgo. Their connection to the college and the Southampton area led to relationships that exists to this day with almost daily phone calls to his "beach cousins."

His connection to Tim Bishop blossomed with their common interests, such as beach volleyball and sports on the beach Road "D" in Southampton, one of the few beach access roads you could park a car on without a permit.

In 1992, The Chancellor of Southampton College resigned and Tim Bishop, then the provost of Southampton College, began to kiddingly refer to Bob Sillerman as the "Chancellor" and the name stuck. Later Tim Bishop asked Bob Sillerman if he really would like to be a "Chancellor" and Bob Sillerman replied, "What is the job about?" After meeting with Dr. David Steinberg, the President of Long Island University, Bob Sillerman accepted the job of Chancellor and a position on the Board of Trustees of Long Island University.

The challenge of his new job was not something Bob Sillerman took lightly. From his early days selling door to door greeting cards to his highly successful acquisition of radio stations and partnership with Bruce Morrow of "Cousin Brucie" fame, Bob had been an exponentially successful person in whatever field he chose to lend his talent to. The tasks of creating a greater sense of confidence in the Board of Trustees in the future of Southampton College and stimulating the interest of the Southampton community in the importance of the College appealed to Bob's sense of mission. He was also faced with a statistically young college, with a small endowment and a young alumni group who were not generating a great amount of financial support.

Congressman Tim Bishop said "Bob Sillerman has always been entrepreneurial, intellectually curious and a risk taker and he brought those attributes to the college. Which was a perfect fit. When we started "All for the Sea," he (Bob Sillerman) was not even involved in the concert business but he met Ron Delsener on the field before the first concert and they struck up a friendship and through that casual meeting Bob got into the commercial concert business."

"All for The Sea "went on to become the most successful venue on the East End of Long Island. The Concert series helped focus money and publicity on the college's marine science center and raised the overall prestige of the college in the public's mind. The fact that this little college produced 38 Fulbright scholars in 42 years is something that people will ponder for generations.

Exciting things were happening at Southampton College under Bob Sillerman's tutelage.

The Writers program was being finely tuned, a greater emphasis on the college's strengths were being emphasized and a sense of greater community culture and involvement was being created.

In 1996 Chancellor Bob Sillerman decided to present Kermit the Frog with an Honorary Degree. Bob felt that " most of my generation learned to read their ABCs and count from watching Sesame Street. It had a profound impact on education. Southampton was always a place that stressed environmentalism, compassion and ground breaking realities."

Kermit, according to polls that year, was also more popular then any of the presidential candidates. So Kermit gave the speech and newspapers from all over America wrote about Southampton College.

There were some mistakes along the way. Bob says that if he had to do it over again he would not have built a world class teaching facility like Chancellor's Hall, which was sorely needed, but rather a Recreation Center or a Student Union. "Because when you recruit students, they do not look at facilities they assume exist, like classrooms, but rather buildings that all the students use all the time, rather than a building that some of the students use some of the time."

"Also some of the ' hires' we made were not right. Sometimes we had good people in the wrong jobs at the wrong time."

I asked Bob Sillerman why he thought that the Parrish Art Museum's intent to buy some of the College property to create a new free standing museum structure on the college grounds did not succeed since it held such great promise for the future of both institutions. He replied that he felt "that the handling, by LIU, of the Parrish Art Museum deal was bumbling, inadequate, abysmal and cost Southampton College more the $6 million in potential endowment

Peter Boyle
Actor

By Avery Andon

Few actors can say they literally led the life of a monk before entering the Hollywood limelight. Even fewer can lay claim to having had John Lennon as the best man at their wedding.

This is just the tip of the iceberg for Peter Boyle. Everything about him is extraordinary and unique in its own right. As a teenager, Mr. Boyle was introduced to the entertainment industry by his father, who hosted a popular children's lunchtime cartoon show in Philadelphia during the 1950s called "Lunch with Uncle Pete." He remembers his father being, "A creative and wonderful man." The prolific performer served for a brief period of time in the army, and was a monk in the Christian Brothers order before moving to New York in pursuit of a spot on the silver screen during the late 1960s.

Once in the Big Apple, Boyle perfected his craft with guidance from Uta Hagen and earned spots on several off Broadway productions as well as doing a tour of The Odd Couple. Later on he also appeared in Chicago's Second City Troupe.

After receiving widespread acclaim for his performance as a hardhat bigot in the controversial 1970 film Joe, Mr. Boyle veered away from roles that glamorized violence in an effort to focus on more positive material. During this time, he befriended the actress Jane Fonda and joined her in protests against the Vietnam War.

Four years later brought the release of Mel Brook's parody Young Frankenstein, in which Boyle played the monster who is brought back from the dead. The film was a huge hit, and is considered one of the best comedies ever released to this day. Boyle again made waves in Hollywood with the 1977 television film Tail Gunner Joe for his vividly accurate performance as Senator Joseph McCarthy.

Peter Boyle represents what's missing in Hollywood today. Unlike many rising stars, he possesses a humble talent. You recognize him immediately, and know he's going to say something worth listening to. Though he plays supporting roles more often than not, his presence is strikingly powerful. It's the way he adapts to each role, and credibly replicates each character.

Despite several health-related setbacks, Mr. Boyle has managed to remain an award-winning working actor. In 1990 a stroke left him unable to speak for six months, but he returned to the studio immediately after completing vocal rehabilitation. By 1996, he had won an Emmy Award for Outstanding Guest actor in a Drama Series for his appearance in the X-Files. Then in 1999 he suffered a heart attack on the set of the hit television series Everybody Loves Raymond, a show that has gotten him numerous Emmys and Actors Guild Awards. After having emergency angioplasty surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital in Burbank, Mr. Boyle resumed his career full steam ahead.

Frank Barone, the character he plays on Everybody Loves Raymond could be the most genuine portrayal of an American father in the history of television fathers. There is a familiarity with his phrases, faces and actions as if he's taken a little piece from every one of our dads and neatly tucked them into one man we can all relate to. The witty and humorous remarks he directs at his wife and two sons remind me of my own father, and I'm sure many others would say the same.

Mr. Boyle frequents the Hamptons and "loves the beaches and countryside." When in town, he enjoys eating at the notable East Hampton restaurants Nick & Toni's and Babette's. In an effort to assist aspiring writers, he will participate in "An evening of Unusual Love Stories" at Guild Hall on June 25th to benefit the Pushcart Prize Fellowships. Boyle considers the unusual love story of his life. "I met my wife-to-be on the set of Young Frankenstein. The rest is history." Apparently, he was introduced to his wife for the first time while in full make-up as the monster for Young Frankenstein. Talk about a first impression!

Then there is the Pushcart Press, which was founded in 1972, when writers who were unhappy with their distributors hawked books from pushcarts on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan. The company was founded by Bill Henderson, who has made it his lifelong mission to teach upcoming authors how to publish their works.

In 1975, the Pushcart Prize Fellowship was established, and is given out every year to honor small presses for their literary works. Boyle has supported the Pushcart Prize for years and is an avid reader whose favorite books include Justine by Laurence Durrell that he says was, "hot stuff when I was younger" and Henry Fielding's classic Tom Jones.

Mr. Boyle will read "Young Man on Sixth Avenue" by Mark Halliday. The star-studded fundraiser will also include readings by David Strathairn, Samantha Mathis, Andrew McCarthy, Bob Balaban and Marcia Gay Harden. For more information and ticket reservations, contact Guild Hall Box office at 631-324-4050.

DOLANS TRY TO TAKE CABLEVISION PRIVATE

By Dan Rattiner

In a move that took the business world completely by surprise this past week, the family that owns Cablevision, which has the monopoly on all cable service here on Long Island, announced that it was going to take the company private.

The family consists of the patriarch and founder of the company, Charles Dolan, and three of his sons, one of whom, James Dolan, is currently the President of Cablevision. There is also Patrick Dolan and Tom Dolan, two other sons of Charles, who have lesser jobs at the company.

Cablevision has been a public company for about fifteen years now, and before the announcement, it was trading at about $27 a share. The Dolans own about 20% of the stock, but have about 70% of the voting shares. Nevertheless, Cablevision has been in the spotlight in recent years because, in spite of the monopoly it enjoys, it has ventured out on a variety of other enterprises, most of which have failed, angering the stockholders. For example, it bought The Wiz stores and had to go bankrupt with them. It bought a chain of theatres which went nowhere. It disastrously launched a communications satellite, trying to become a player on the national stage, but this turned into a debacle. Estimates are that the abandonment of this project, which was called Voom, will result in a massive $300 billion write-off, severely depressing the stock.

There have also been public relations disasters. Cablevision filed a lawsuit against the Mayor of New York to try to stop the West Side Stadium project. When that was thrown out by a judge, they attempted to buy the property for an amount almost equal to the value of the company, and when that failed, they tried to buy another small cable company, Adelphia, which also failed. Along the way, they seemed to mismanage many of their more successful properties, including the Rockettes, Madison Square Garden, the New York Rangers and the New York Knicks. For over a year, they refused to broadcast the Yankee games because they could not compromise a dispute with a network owned by the Yankee organization. Now they are involved in a similar dispute involving the Mets. They also refused to broadcast ads in favor of the West Side Stadium on any of the cable networks that come into our homes on their pipeline, an amazing violation of freedom of expression, which apparently they were legally able to do.

In recent days, the Dolans have been called, by many members of the media, the owners of the most hated company in the New York Metropolitan Area, particularly because of the myopic view they took of the Mayor's desire to bring the Olympic Games to New York City, and because of the lawsuits against what would have been the prime stadium for that spectacle on the West Side.

In any case, the Dolans propose to take the company private by buying out the non-family stockholders with an offer of $33.50 a share, which Wall Street analysts say is too low to be successful and is probably a first offer. Buying back the company would value the company at $7.9 billion. It amounts to $4,377 per cable subscriber if you do the math.

The New York Times seemed baffled by the plan. This past Tuesday, they ran an article entitled WALL STREET WONDERS WHAT'S UP IN CABLE DEAL. Could it be that the deal made sense? Did they just want to get the company out of the spotlight? Will this give them a leg up in someday selling the cable business to Time-Warner?

The deal is not quite so straightforward. Before the stock buyout, the Dolans intend to split the company in two. They will spin off their entertainment holdings — Madison Square Garden, the Knicks and the Rangers, the Rockettes and the AMC Channel — which James Dolan will still run as a public company. But their main breadwinner, the cable monopoly, will now be in private hands, run by the patriarch and founder, 78-year-old Charles Dolan. If nothing else, this will separate the father and son, who have been at odds with one another quite publicly about which way to take the company.

Also as a result, Charles Dolan will be able to promulgate his very imaginative, innovative and daring business gambles without interference. And James Dolan, while remaining in the Wall Street spotlight where he will continue getting the pummeling, will be able to console himself with the dancing girls, sports teams and cable network movie celebrities.

Our theory here at the paper is they are doing this so they can squeeze us customers for more money without getting all the negative publicity about freedom of the press and rights of the viewers, while taking advantage of the low stock price which has been clearly depressed in recent times because of all the pummeling and missteps. Buy low, sell high. It's a theory with considerable merit.

And we think they screwed the company up deliberately to do this bargain basement buyout. It was a master plan.

Who's Here

Bruce Nalepinski
Director

By Emily J Weitz

The sounds of Saturday morning coffee brewing mingled with a dog's barking in the background as I settled into conversation with Bruce Nalepinski. His morning rituals mirrored my own, and yet the fascinating path that has brought him to this point, reclined in his kitchen overlooking Three Mile Harbor, are worth writing home about. Mr. Nalepinski is set to begin a new job in July, in which he will run an educational and government-oriented television station in Southampton. He will be in charge of presenting local content to the diverse population of Southampton Town, which varies from the posh summer parties in Southampton Village to the precarious relationship between the Shinnecocks and the town. His plans for the show include coverage of town meetings, educational programming like English as a Second Language, and other programs with local interest as the focus.

But Mr. Nalepinski has not always been a local interest kind of a guy. In fact, even though he is a New Yorker born and raised, and a Long Island boy since he was nine, his career has taken him all over the world. It all started after he graduated from St. John's University with a degree in both business and economics. For a short time, he was in active duty in the National Guard, and he returned in 1970 to file for unemployment. He was sent to Channel 13, a local public television station, one month before it underwent a massive merge with N.E.T., giant company. For six months, Mr. Nalepinski utilized his college major by working on the business side of things for the company, but he quickly realized that it was on the creing in East Hampton. For years, they searched for their dream house complete with water view, and in 1979, they found land on Three

Kramer, he decided to join the National Director's Guild. He worked for NBC Whitepapers doing 90-minute documentaries for a few years before returning to freelance and then to public television. It became more and more clear through the spectrum of work that he did that his passion lay in environmental issues. So he started traveling the world to discuss serious environmental issues – on film, of course. He's traveled to such places as the North Pole (an island off of Greenland in the Arctic Circle, to be exact), Japan, Hawaii, and South Africa. When asked which place he feels compelled to return to, he replied that Hawaii always calls him back. But he added that South Africa is one of the most gorgeous places in the world, if only they could get through the political problems and the poverty. While in South Africa, he was working for ABC on a program called Earth Journal, which he helped to create with anthropologist Dr. Richard Leakey. They profiled unsung heroes and documented flora and fauna. Mr. Nalepinski pointed out that Capetown, South Africa has 25 different climates. He recalled walking down the street and looking up at Table Mountain as a "waterfall of clouds spilled over the side."

Mr. Nalepinski recounted another tale, of when he traveled to Vancouver Island to do a segment with a marine biologist documenting killer whales. It turned out that a massive whale was found dead of natural causes, and Mr. Nalepinski and his crew were on the biggest boat around. So, they ended up towing this dead whale through the stormy sea to bring it to a place where the marine biologists could examine it to find its cause working on a film for Wesley Snipes, profiling Dr. Ben, a black Egyptian Jew who escorted tourists around Egypt, exposing them to the Nubian race who once ruled Egypt, but whose existence is not even acknowledged in the historical museum in Cairo.

Between South Africa, Brazil, and Egypt, Mr. Nalepinski draws some similarities. "Just beyond the grandiose areas of the wealthy few," he recalls sadly, "are shanty-towns where people are stealing electricity from one wire in the hopes of lighting one bare bulb."

Mr. Nalepinski and his wife Fran have two grown children, who both attended East Hampton High School. He hopes to engage the community with the exciting new project of bringing local television to Southampton. In regards to assuming the life of a stationary man, he reminds me that for all the places he's been, "everything I've ever done has brought me back to the East End."

Bob Sillerman feels that what impelled Long Island University to close Southampton College was "the undeniable fact that the faculty strikes at both Post and Brooklyn exacted a heavy economic toll on the university and they, the board of trustees, were afraid of escalating deficits. But they had some bad information. They closed the college because they lost their courage in the face of bad advice. Their posture and actions in closing this college have caused the loss of more than $11 million in potential endowments. Long Island University has angered potential well-minded, considerate donors and benefactors who would have raised millions of dollars for the New Library and this College. They have been angered and alienated".

He further stated that if "Long Island University handles the negotiations with Stony Brook in the same fashion they handled the Parrish Art Museum deal they will lose Stony Brook. Negotiations have not started yet but upon tendering my resignation I extracted a promise from the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Long Island University that they, the University, will continue to keep their promise that Southampton College will only be used as a place for higher education. The state in the meantime needs to allocate more money to Stony Brook for operating funds for a future University to supplant Southampton College. Stony Book will need to have operating capital to subsidize students and as of yet it does not have it."

Bob said that if Stony Brook is successful in their negotiations with Long Island University he would be "very approachable about creating the 'New All for The Sea' concert series."

Bob told to me "I was stunned when they asked me to resign. They said that I was too emotionally involved and they, the board of trustees, were afraid of a conflict of interest.

"The only thing I have done is to act on the directions of the Board of Trustees of Long Island University."

The sad fact is that the promise, by Long Island University, of a College within a College at CW Post to perpetuate a newly minted curriculum and the name "Southampton College" has turned to dust.

Southampton College has had its last commencement and now its last Chancellor has been asked to resign for no apparent reason other than their fear of his "love and passion for his adopted College" along with his desire to see the Long Island University keeps its promises to the students, alumni, administration, faculty and community to keep the land a place for Higher Education and to bargain honestly with Stony Brook to create another college in its stead.

As we go to press we have learned that a member of the Board of Trustees of Long Island University has resigned in protest over the treatment of the Former Chancellor of Southampton College, Robert F.X. Sillerman. Warren Schwerin stated, "I have tendered my resignation to the Board of Trustees of Long Island University because they have treated my fellow Trustee, Robert FX Sillerman, so badly, when he has in fact done so much for the University and for Southampton College in particular."

Rocco's of Sag Harbor Shut Down, Comes Back as 21 West Water

By David Stoll

Last spring, I reported about efforts on the East End to address problems caused by certain night clubs in residential areas. The Town of Southampton had closed down Conscience Point, enacted a complex zoning regime meant to turn bad nightclub owners into better citizens, and forced the owners of Jet East to make improvements relating to parking and noise. Meanwhile, the Village of Sag Harbor had closed down Rocco's. This year, a new nightclub has now opened at 21 West Water Street, the Rocco's site, possibly even operated by the same people, and it is causing a fury. But otherwise, the quality of life problems largely seem under control.

If you go to 21 West Water Street, you will see a lovely new Italian restaurant called Daniele. Daniele was opened after agreement was reached with the Sag Harbor Village that no nightclub would be operated at that location, which is next to an inn and several homes. But during the last few weekends, the ghost of Rocco's has returned, bringing all the noise and traffic. In fact, this was the plan, and the owners are quite brazen about it. They even went so far to place a listing in the June 17th edition of this paper on that on Saturday NYC DJ Junior Vasquez "plays all night" and invited us to "dance the night away." The DJ, or someone, pulled up in an enormous white stretch SUV.

Even before that night, 21 West Water Street had received numerous noise complaints and citations for parking violations and fire code violations. In an earlier weekend (mind you, the nightclub has not been open long), a man was repeatedly stabbed in the stomach. A man from Flanders was arrested for the assault, and another man was arrested for drug possession. The owners have retained Patrick Kevin Brosnahan, Jr., whose career seems to be taking sides against residential homeowners in disputes with nightclubs. He led the charge, unsuccessfully, last year to stop the Town of Southampton from enacting its zoning law. Bringing Brosnahan into the mix means that the owners are serious about operating 21 West Water Street as an all-night party every weekend. The Village has retained its own special counsel, Gary Weintraub, also an expert in these matters, to fight the nightclub.

Meanwhile, not much else is going on at all. Conscience Point is a thing of the past. Jet East's improvements have made a huge difference, and the club is for sale anyway. Belle's East is gone, to be replaced by another JL restaurant. Cain at Cabana, Haven, and Cigar Bar are hot spots, but they are not located next to houses. While calls to the relevant police and code enforcement officials were not returned, the people with whom I was able to speak did not seem to think that night club noise is a major problem this season, outside of Sag Harbor. If there are nightclubs creating problems this season, please let this paper know, so we can write a follow-up story.

I would not want to end this article leaving the impression that I think nightclubs are a bad thing. Quite the contrary. Nightclubs can and should be a fun part of the summer season in the Hamptons. In fact, it is a shame that there are so few left. But this is the unfortunate consequence of bad behavior by people who own nightclubs in residential neighborhoods.

BREAKING NEWS

KILLER OF PAUL KLEBNIKOV IS REPORTEDLY IDENTIFIED

A prosecutor in Russia has announced that the man responsible for the killing of crusading American journalist and editor Paul Klebnikov last year in Moscow was a member of the Chechen mafia named Khozh-Akhmed Nukhayev. There has been no trial of Mr. Nukhayev because he remains at large. There has also been no trial of the two assassins allegedly hired by Mr. Nukhayev, because they too remain at large.

According to the prosecutor's announcement, Klebnikov, a member of the prominent Sagaponack family and a frequent visitor here, had written unfavorably about Mr. Nukhayev, linking Mr. Nukhayev with the crime and corruption associated with the collapse of the Soviet Union, and then publishing this in a book entitled A CONVERSATION WITH A BARBARIAN. Now, as the recently appointed editor of the Russian edition of Forbes Magazine, Klebnikov was in a position to write more damaging articles. As a result, as he was leaving his office in Moscow last July he was approached and shot four times by the two assassins.

VILLA MARIA BUYER NOT YET CHOSEN

As we go to press, we learn that the buyer of the Villa Maria estate in Water Mill still has not been chosen, in spite of rumors to the contrary. It was reported earlier this week that the contract had been signed, but as of Tuesday night, the various bids for the property, and we have learned there were numerous numbers of them over $30 million, are just now in the process of being evaluated by the owners, the Sisters of St. Dominic of Amityville based in Hicksville.

The Council of this Order intends to choose one of those who has bid over $30 million, but not necessarily the highest bidder. Their interest is in seeing the property preserved and used in the future as the grand mansion it was originally built for. "Different bidders have proposed different contingencies," said Robert Evjen, a realtor for Prudential, one of the agencies that is co-brokering the sale.

EPLEY DEFEATS TUFO IN MAYOR'S RACE

In one of the most bitter elections in recent years, Mark Epley, the administrator for the Seafield rehabilitation facility in Westhampton Beach, became Mayor of Southampton Village by defeating his opponent Peter Tufo, 889 to 654. The election was marked by charges of stolen campaign signs and nasty personal attacks. Tufo, who is a Manhattan lawyer and former Ambassador to Hungary, ran on the Good Sense line while Mark Epley, a local man, ran on the Integrity Party line. As Tufo pointed out, Epley's Seafield was required to reimburse Medicare $3.1 million in 2001 after a government audit, although nobody was charged with wrongdoing. As Epley pointed out, Tufo was currently going through his fourth divorce.

HOME SOLD FOR $90 MILLION IN EAST HAMPTON

This past Monday, it was announced that the oceanfront estate of Adelaide de Menil on Further Lane was sold for $90 million in a private sale. The buyer is reported to be a Swedish businessman.

The de Menil property is 40 acres, and includes, in addition to the main house, numerous historic buildings, barns and saltboxes and so forth, that were moved to the property in the 1960s and 1970s.

Whether the real estate market is flat or frothy or bubbly is either true or false depending on which way you look at this remarkable sale, which is reportedly the largest amount of money ever to be paid for the purchase of a private home in America.

have a metal plate attached to my rear license plate that identifies me as that), and when I joined up with LIBBA, I had to take a pledge that if I ever came on anybody stuck in the sand, I would help them out. I also happen to have, although I have never used it, an old broken fishing rod in my truck. So I wouldn't need that.

But a portable toilet? I called the State Office up at Montauk Downs and asked them about that. "Most people use a pot with a lid on it," I was told.

I could do that.

I finished up lunch, paid my bill, and headed over to my next stop, which was Johnny's Tackle Shop, on Main Street in Montauk next to the Shagwong Fisherman's Tavern. I went inside. Behind the counter was a girl who looked about twelve years old.

"Can I help you?"

She had a big, winning smile. What I want, I wanted to say, is stuff that would make me appear to be a fisherman. Instead, this is what I said.

"Do you have anything that's like, bait, but not bait?"

"Like what?"

"Like something else. I hate the smell of bait."

"We have frozen clams you can use."

"No. Something else. Like something wooden. With hooks on it."

She gave it some thought. Then she leaned back and called over her shoulder. "Ma?"

Ma came out from the back. She politely asked me to explain again exactly what I wanted. Instead, I saw some wooden fishing lures on a rack for sale. I walked over to them.

"Could you catch fish in the ocean with these?" I asked.

"Like fluke?"

"Fluke. Dolphin. Blowfish." I was making it up.

"They're good for fishing at night. They're shiny. The fish are attracted to them."

Night Fishing: Front View

"I can fish at night," I said. "I'll take two."

I had the rod and reel. Now I had the lures. What else would I need? A pot. I bought a plastic pot with a top with holes in it. Probably to put fish in. But you could put other things in. The whole thing was $19. I was in the business of not being a fisherman but looking like I was. But now I wondered if the State could get me on something else.

"Do you need a license to go surfcasting?" I asked.

"No," Ma said. "Just for fresh water, not for salt."

I'm a saltwater non-fisherman only.

And let me tell you, if there are any officials from the State of New York reading this, I am in the process of learning to be a fisherman. I have the stuff. I have a fishing trainer. And a fishing trauma psychiatrist. I meet them — the psychiatrist is also a fisherman — on the beach. We fish. I lie down and talk for the psychiatrist. And then I sit down in a chair with a laptop computer and I write about it. Nothing in the rules against that from what I could see.

For some reason, given the fact that I had had this nice lunch, had been given a ticket and booted off the beach, had bought all this gear and now realized that the whole State part of the sixteen mile long beach is just 2000 yards, I decided that that was enough for one day. I wanted to go home. I would deal with my State sticker on another day.

At home around four, I faxed the article over to the Trustee lawyer (who had called back), and then talked on the phone to Trustee Tom Knobel, who had been told about my call from the secretary and who now called me. He knew all about this bill. And here is what he said.

"We have a meeting scheduled for tomorrow and will be bringing all this up with the attorney. So that's why he doesn't know about it yet.

"I have a great concern about this bill for a host of reasons. It really is quite horrendous. It takes the Coastal Erosion Hazard Act away from local enforcement. It bans all beach driving everywhere. But then if you bring a particular situation to their attention and if they decide it doesn't need to be banned, then you have to let everybody go there, which is probably a good reason why it should be banned.

"Until now, all the local authorities have come up with a way to allow the different uses to coexist reasonably well with different determinations. It's a local thing."

"What about the Dongan Patent?" I asked.

"It shouldn't defeat the Dongan Patent. But then the judges are New York State Judges. We'll have to rely on moving this business, if it gets this far, to Federal courts. But what I think would be better is to get to the State Senate and say let's stop this nonsense."

I read him the part where Brodsky says nothing in this bill makes anyone's life difficult.

He let out a howl. It was just so ridiculous on the face of it. "Brodsky couldn't possibly mean that," he said.

I had another question. "Isn't the sand road from the Montauk Highway through the State Park a Trustee Road?"

"The State is insisting on things that are clearly questionable. The Dongan Patent gives the freeholders and proprietors, to use the Old English phraseology, certain rights to their beaches. I don't think we're going to make treaties with Great Britain. But it is a three hundred and fifty year old enforceable patent. And now, the State has begun harassing fishermen who are driving out to Goff Point at the end of Napeague Harbor. They've never done this before. I think it has to stop."

The next day, I learned more about the State beach sticker.

You can't buy it in the summer. They only sell it from January 1 to June 1 and then from September 2 to December 31. There is a sticker good for one week you can buy during the summer time, but you can't park except in a parking lot. And the nearest one to Napeague State Beach is at Hither Hills, six miles away. And then you have to haul your fishing gear.

The bottom line here is I think there are too many people sitting in these state offices with too much time on their hands. They wind up making up stuff that makes absolutely no sense whatsoever for anybody, at least on the East End. •

"Celebrity Civilization"

For those of you craving inspiration in your lives, Playwrights Kitchen may just fulfill your appetite. Thanks to the driving forces of critically acclaimed Writer/Producer Karin Yapalater and her business partner, Emmy award winning Writer/Producer Annette Handley Chandler, the LA born non-profit play discovery and reading series, Playwrights Kitchen East, has hit The Guild Hall John Drew Theater this summer. PKE was founded a decade ago by actor Dan Lauria and Joe Cacaci. Yapalater is so passionate about PKE, she put her own personal projects aside. "I was in the middle of writing a book myself when this all came up. I just believe that there's something about what PKE does that is really important for the community. We bring together writers, directors, actors and we celebrate new work." Chandler agrees, "There is a terrific pool of talent here. I really wanted to see if I could work with local writers and introduce them to the community." This past weekend, Yapalater and Chandler produced A Delicate Arrangement by Dawn O'Leary and directed by Bob Kalfin. The successful reading was the first of four productions scheduled this summer and starred Dina Merrill, Ted Hartley, Danica McKellar, "Winnie" from the hit TV show "The Wonder Years," and "One Life To Live's" Nathaniel Marston. A reading at Guild Hall is a raw and intimate way to experience a play before it hits Broadway and after each production, the Director, Writers and Actors stick around for an intimate Q & A session with the audience before heading to The Little Kitchen in Sag Harbor for a private dinner. Yapalater plays host to these invite-only dinner parties, in hopes of solving some industry issues. She shared, "The theatre experience has lost its sensitivity in some way. Things have gotten so commercial, it's all about the big names, promoting big things and the remake of this and that." Hartley, who is also Chairman of RKO Pictures, agrees, "We're in Devils sleep all day and stay up all night. They do not pair off, but live by themselves in dens made of twigs and bark, and though they are found all over the island, they tend not to wander too far from where they were born, considering that particular region of the island home. As the sun sets, they wake up hungry. They forage around, lumbering from side to side down well-worn paths through the woods on four legs, looking for things to eat. When they find something, usually the remains of a dead animal, they make a coughing noise, which is a signal to other devils to come over and have a look. They have been called the Vacuum Cleaners of Tasmania, because with their powerful jaws, they can eat the remains of dead rabbits, wombats, kangaroos, wallabies, sheep or other animals and consume not only the meat, but also the bones and the fur. Their bite has been measured by scientists to have strength nine times that of a dog. They eat not only meat but chicken, fish from the rivers, crabs and clams, frogs, sea squirts and crayfish and when really hungry, seaweed, insects, snakes, lizards, larvae and even vegetables.

Oddly, when the other devils come over, they all begin fighting to decide who gets to eat first. It gets quite bloody. The start of the fighting is announced with aggressive sneezes, and then moves to warbles, vibratos and growls, and when the melee begins, screeches and roars. Then, with everything having been figured out, everybody eats.

Nobody knows why people started calling them Tasmanian Devils. But there are theories. When the first settlers came to Australia, they mistakenly thought the devils were killing their sheep and chickens, and so they put a bounty on their heads. Kill a devil and you got twenty-five cents. In this manner, Tasmanian Devils were almost driven to extinction. But then it was found that they did not attack live sheep or chickens, but only their carcasses after they died. They were actually cleaning up. And so then the farmers decided they were their friends. They have become a protected species. Though they are still called Devils.

The mating habits of the Tasmanian Devils are also quite remarkable. The female devils, which are slightly smaller than the males, go into heat once a year, in March. This happens to all the females over the age of two, and it drives the males crazy. They cluster around the females and proceed to fight noisily with one another while the females watch.

According to a description of this phenomenon published recently in the New York Times about the serious disease plaguing the devils, "(after this) blood soaked combat, females select 'big butch dudes,' and allow themselves to be dragged by the scruff of the neck into a burrow. There they scream and fight for several days, mating many times for hours at a time. At the end of such bouts, the male thrusts his sperm into the female every two minutes."

According to a publication put out by the Department of Primary Industries, Water and the Environment of Australia, female Tasmanian Devils are the only creatures known to man that keep a backward opening pouch tightly closed while mating.

Twenty-one days after mating, the females give birth to up to twelve young. Right out of the birth canal the Tasmanian Devils begin fighting. There are only four teats on the mother, positioned above the pouch. And so the twelve babies fight for them, the winners firmly latching themselves onto these teats for the next three months. The losers die.

After the three months, the babies are weaned by their mother, gently but forcibly, and the mother directs them to either a hollow log or a cave where they build a nest. Then she goes off.

This is about all anybody knows about Tasmanian Devils. They are such nasty critters in the wild — although they will not attack a human — that scientists have not been successful in studying them that much. The particular illness that has recently struck certain herds of Tasmanian Devils is totally befuddling to scientists. The devils break out in facial tumors, and then two months later, horribly disfigured, die.

Also completely baffling scientists, is what happens to a Tasmanian Devil who lives a normal full span of years, which is almost always six. After achieving the age of six, the Tasmanian Devils encounter sudden natural death. They have this in common with only four other species on the planet, and nobody knows why that happens to those species either. One day they are fine, the next day they drop dead. There you have it.

Now here is a snippet of information from another source, the University of Michigan Museum of Zoology.

"Despite its ferocious reputation, the little 'devils' have proven to be easily tamed and, indeed, have become affectionate and playful companions. They are very clean, fond of water, and love to bask in the sun."

Go figure. Hurry and run down to your local pet shop and order yours now. Get two. A male and a female. And invite over the neighbors. •

a celebrity civilization. Celebrities are normally actors, or they want to do something other than just being a celebrity. Ted's talented wife, Dina, who has shared the big screen with Cary Grant, Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn and most recently, Jamie Foxx, is a huge fan of PKE, "It's about playwrights and it's about theatre and I am an actor. I like to work and I'm looking for work, right?" Danica is all grown up and was thrilled to participate in PKE. "Theatre is a unique medium for entertainment and a lot of people don't take the time to go check it out anymore, especially young people, but it has such interesting stories to tell." If you missed Danica, you can pick her up at your local newsstand, "I'm featured in Stuff magazine this month, which is the first time I've ever posed in lingerie before. I told them look, we're doing this but the pictures have got to be sexy in a classy way." Yapalater pleads, "The community needs to be involved, needs to part of this for PKE to succeed. STATE BUYS 122 ACRES OCEANFRONT IN MONTAUK

The State of New York has purchased the vacant oceanfront property known as Amsterdam Beach in Montauk for $16.5 million. The property sits just adjacent to and just to the west of the former Andy Warhol estate between Indian Field Ranch out by the Lighthouse and Ditch Plains surfing beach closer to town.

As a result of this sale, about three quarters of the 2,200 acres of land known as Montauk Point is now parkland, owned either by the town, the county, the state or the Federal Government. This is the sixth State park in Montauk if you include the little one in Napeague.

WOMAN IN CAR HIT BY TRAIN SURVIVES

Saturday evening at around 6:20 p.m. 89-year-old Loretta Murray was heading north on Snake Hollow Road when she came to a set of train tracks. According to witnesses, she swerved her car into the southbound lane, maneuvering past the lowered gate when her car was hit by an oncoming locomotive. Murray suffered a fractured right leg and broken left ankle, and as of press time has been in intensive care.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #354
Mongo like fire....

Like everyone else, I miss things from my youth. I miss perfect eyesight. I don't think it's a function of age that our eyesight weakens with time. It is a gift from G-d. The soft focus of myopia keeps our mate's face youthful and attractive forever, or until we put on our glasses. Whichever comes first. I've learned that the best way to take ten years off of my face is to knock the glasses off of his, or accidentally place them under the rear tire of any vehicle.

But what I miss the most is energy. The Aztecs called it "the age of never." When suddenly you think to yourself, moving was never this hard before. Walking to the store was never so far, and uphill both ways!

One night you're at a party. It's 1 a.m. and suddenly you think to yourself, "I gotta get outta here. I gotta be at work at eight." A few years go by and on the way to another party you say to yourself, "No matter what, I'm leaving by midnight." A few more years go by and you find yourself saying to your host, "I gotta leave by 11 PM to get home by midnight. If I don't get at least 5 hours of sleep, my whole day will be shot." Next you're asking on the phone, "Well, what time does the party actually start?" You're asking because you're thinking, "I'll take a nap before I go then I won't be tired tomorrow if I stay late."

For men, here's where the big shift happens. Here's what separates the Hard Working Joe from the Good Time Charlie, the young bucks from the warriors. One day a Good Time Charlie who has worked exhausted one time too many, begins to notice something that other men around his age are starting to do.

He notices that men gather in broad daylight on weekend afternoons. They roast raw meat which attracts women and children who praise them for their ability to roast meats of all types. Just like a night time party, they can drink beer and tell stories. Good Time Charlie has discovered another gift from G-d, fire...or, as modern man calls it....barbecue.

Fire in the form of barbecue is the warrior's party time. He discovers he likes barbecues better. They end earlier and he can get a whole night's sleep! Plus, barbecues are far more manly than parties. At parties, women put out tables of fancy dishes with lots of noodles, a hungry man needs to eat three plates to feel satisfied. Not so at a barbecue. The women still bring the noodle dishes, but he gets to eat slabs of meat marinated in garlic, onion, peppers and every available gas generating vegetable on the market. Combined with the beer and the baked beans, he learns never to turn his back to the barbecue flames.

Barbecue's appeal to a man's primitive soul. He must gather a bag of special black rocks. His hands become soiled as he piles the stones into the pit he has dug or purchased from Sears. Only he, the firemaker, can stuff tinder between the stones just right. Only he, the firemaker, can douse the magic stones with the water that ignites. All the women and children must stand at a safe distance, for they are only allowed to watch. The firemaker ignites a small stick with fire and then he tries to light the tinder around the black firestones. But he forgot to say the magic words. So he lights another small stick, says the unrepeatable magic words and tries again. This process is repeated until the fire god has heard enough already of the unrepeatable magic words and unleashes a burst of flames.

The fire must be nursed into a controlled blaze. When the stones are hot enough, which can only be judged from the thermostat that is genetically coded into the palms of all men, the flesh of the slain animals and fishes can be placed over the blaze by the firemaker. When enough time has gone by, and the firemaker has heard enough praise of his mastery of the fire pit, and he has heard enough begging and pleading from the starving women and children, he announces the food is ready. Everyone lines up, holds their plates humbly, eyes down, as they entreat the firemaker for sustenance.

The warriors know that microwaves are bad magic used by women. It is barbecue, which contains fire given to man by G-d, that is the good magic. As one of my brothers, whose nickname is Mongo, once said at a barbecue, "Nuker bad. Mongo no like nuker. Fire...fire good. Mongo like fire..."

HUSTLE AND FLOW

The Summer Premiere Series of the Hamptons Film Festival kicked off with a bang, no better said, a rap, with the screening of Hustle and Flow. This film was a people's choice selection at the Sundance Film Festival, and for good reason, the movie and the acting can take your breath away. Both the lead Terrence Howard and co-star Anthony Anderson were on hand at the screening at the Southampton UA Cinema, and got lots of positive reactions from the guests that included people from Elle Magazine, the primary sponsor. Congratulations to Andrew Saffir for putting together a winning night.

GROUP FOR SOUTH FORK

You know it's the season when the Group for the South Fork has its big fund raiser. As in the past it was held at the Wolffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack. There was a huge silent auction with excellent gifts to buy for others or better for yourself. Then came dinner, dancing and live auction by Dick Cavett and Lorna Kelly. The Group for the South Fork promotes environmental advocacy in the Hamptons to preserve the beautiful natural resources on the South Fork.

MUSTIQUE STORE OPENING

A little bit of the Caribbean and Martha's Vineyard is now in the Hamptons with the opening of Mustique, a unique, breezy store filled with upscale summer fashions for men and women. Owners Nadine Hampton, Judith Karp and Joseph Milo celebrated with friends, a ribbon cutting ceremony, and mimosas. Mustique is next to Koala and Little Red Wagon, also owned by them. Members from the Westhampton Beach Chamber of Commerce arrived and showed their support for the bright, fashionable store which is sure to be a hit.

Water World For Kids

North Fork Writer Tags Along For A Wild Adventure With Atlantis Marine World

By Tim Atwell

Twice a day from mid-April until the end of October (later in the year if weather permits) the Atlantis Explorer leaves from the dock at Atlantis Marine World in Riverhead and heads for Flanders Bay on an environmental tour of the Peconic Estuary. Last week I joined 42 fifth graders from Cutchogue East Elementary School, their teachers, and several parents for a tour led by Pat Palladines, an education and research associate at Blue Ocean Institute in Cold Spring Harbor, and her assistant, Adam Zaleski, a student in Marine Science at Southampton College.

The tour boat became a floating classroom as we proceeded slowly from the dock through a no-wake zone. What is an estuary, anyway? Ms. Palladines told us that an estuary is a protected area of relatively shallow, still water where a river meets the sea. The area between our North and South Forks is an estuary. Estuaries are good places for breeding and are known as the "nurseries of the sea."

Ms. Palladines then asked for a brave volunteer. A girl stepped forward and was asked to close her eyes and hold out her hands, palms up. Then Ms. Palladines produced a large horseshoe crab, its spike-like tail turning every which way, and placed it in the hands of the brave volunteer. The crowd went crazy. The volunteer, whose eyes were now the definition of wide-open, stood her ground. People are afraid of horseshoe crabs, said Ms. Palladines. They think its tail is a weapon and that any creature that size can surely take a bite out of you. Wrong! Horseshoe crabs have no teeth, and they use their tails only to right themselves when they have been somehow turned upside down. This horseshoe crab was then passed around, and the tone was set for the rest of this hands-on tour.

Our destination in Flanders Bay was a small island off Hubbards County Park. Ms. Palladines led us on an exploration of this island, where we found fiddler crabs holed-up in the sand and mud and many small creatures living unnoticed at the water's edge. Then it was time for a volunteer to taste several types of edible seaweed. He said that one of them wasn't too bad.

During our return trip, we stopped and pulled up a trap full of spider crabs. Ms. Palladines took out five or six of them. The rest were released by Mr. Zaleski, who reset the trap. The female spider crab has a large flap that covers most of its underside. If you peel back this flap, you can see the 10,000 or so eggs it will release. The darker they are, the sooner they will be released.

Our tour was almost over, but Ms. Palladines was not done yet. First, she gave us a pop quiz. Those who got the right answers were each allowed to hold a spider crab and release it overboard. There was no shortage of students eager to do this.

We had passed a few osprey nests during our tour, and Ms. Palladines finished up with a talk about the life cycle of the osprey. She needed some more volunteers, though, and she got them. A boy volunteered to play the Papa Osprey and a girl volunteered to play the Mama Osprey and several more boys and girls volunteered to play the Baby Ospreys. She also told us about Dennis Puleston, who noticed in the early 60's that the number of osprey fledglings was dwindling. After reading Rachel Carson's Silent Spring he put two and two together. His efforts led to the nationwide banning of DDT in 1972. There are now 200 osprey nests on Long Island.

You can learn more about ospreys at postmorrow.org. You can also learn about the Blue Ocean Institute at blueocean.org, and if you have an interest in sea turtles, visit widecast.org.

We often think of the ocean as somewhat remote, and yet between one third and one half of the the world's people live within 50 miles of a coastline. We put heavy pressure on the sea. We should remember that solid ground is not Las Vegas - what we do there doesn't stay there. It ends up in the water, from whence it may return to haunt us. A tour like this brings it all back home. My hat is off to Ms. Palladines, who packed a lot into two hours and made a difficult job look easy. Of course, she had help from those fifth graders from Cutchogue, the most eager group of youngsters you are apt to find anywhere.

Another Upgrade In Greenport

Greenport Railroad Station Is Transformed Into A Work Of Art

By Christine Edwards

At dusk, the faint blue outline of a Victorian stationhouse is just visible from the deck of the ferry crossing from Shelter Island to Greenport. The sight is intriguing and invites further inspection upon disembarking from the ferry. By this time, the building is fully illuminated by the blue lights outlining its structure. The yellow glow emanating from the windows gives the marked appearance of a room lit by candlelight, and the reflection of the blue light on the sidewalk looks like a dusting of snow. As you gaze at the stationhouse, the sky darkens and the blue lights get more and more intense. The seascape just beyond the train tracks further enhances the sight, which seems to transport you to an earlier era. This image is truly something right out of a storybook.

But this is not an illustration. It is the image of the Illuminated Station in Greenport, the work of New York-based artist Anita Thatcher. Ten years in the making, the work was created partially to commemorate the anniversary of the railroad out to the East End and partially to honor those who came before us. "I wanted also to honor the American Indians who peopled this area before us and are still around," Thatcher said. To achieve this goal, an early American Indian pictograph of a man and a canoe is projected in deep green light on the front and back roofs of the building. Like the blue lights, this image becomes more intense as night falls. Originally, the projection was going to be an arrowhead, but when Thatcher found the pictograph at the Suffolk County Historical Society Museum in Riverhead, she knew it was a better choice. "I liked the image. It had more life to it than an arrowhead." And because the

Greenport stationhouse is now the home of the East End Seaport Museum and Marine Foundation Museum, the image of a man with a canoe seemed particularly fitting. Thatcher's efforts to recognize the area's first inhabitants were acknowledged when members of the Shinnecock Cultural Center attended the opening celebrations.

Thatcher is best known for her site-specific multimedia installations, films, public art and photographs. She often uses childhood themes to explore issues of perception, as in the illuminated station, which has its inspiration in a storybook. Thatcher also enjoys playing with dimensionality and has created something of a contradiction at the Greenport station. From far away, the lighting makes it look flat and two-dimensional, "a floating image drawn on the page of night." But up close, the lighting enhances the three-dimensional reality of the stationhouse.

The piece was originally slated for the East Hampton railroad station, but through an interesting turn of events, it found a permanent home in Greenport. Thatcher does not seem to have any regrets about her artwork's final home. In many ways, the change in plans became an advantage. The past 10 years have seen the rise of new technology, including the LED lights that made a permanent piece possible. The location of the Greenport station made it possible to project the pictograph onto both sides of the roof. Additionally, the Greenport location, which Thatcher describes as "a total depot," receives a great deal of traffic, with the train, the ferry and even the express bus from Manhattan stopping there. Of the changes in plans, Thatcher said, "It was good in a way. I'm really happy it's permanent. I'm happy it's near the water."

Far from being out of place in Greenport, the station has become the focal point of an area experiencing revitalization. "Greenport has this kind of alive waterfront, and it feels like it belongs there," said Thatcher. Part of the revitalization project was the revamping of the boardwalk, which has built-in lighting within the planks, lighting which not only matches the stationhouse in color, but which seems to point out the way to it. The installation of the new artwork at the stationhouse coincides with an effort to bring in more tourism to the area, which seems to be working. The new attractions, including a carousel, a skate park and hopefully a camera obscura and a renovated theater, are making the ferry rides, which Thatcher jokingly refers to as "forced boating," worth the trip.

Dan's North Fork Goes To... STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

The Mattituck Lions Club recently held their Annual Strawberry Festival. The Lions Club has been holding this festival on Father's Day weekend since June 16, 1955. For the last 51 years all proceeds have gone and will continue to go to charities such as the Guide-Dog Foundation, 9/11 charities, The Tsunami Relief Fund, and to people in the community that need help.

The festival wouldn't be the festival without "Hulling Night." About 400 community volunteers gathered on the night before the official opening and hulled approximately a half million berries, which is about 10,400 quarts of strawberries!

The festival was "berry" entertaining with music, dancing and the coronation of the Strawberry Queen. This has been a tradition since 1956. There was a craft show with crafts of all kinds including bottles with clocks in them, seasonings and dips, tiles with dogs painted on them, T-shirts, and other fun things. There were also carnival rides and games of chance for the kid in all of us, and an international food court with scrumptious and delectable foods of all kinds. There was a beautiful fireworks display, a coloring contest, raffle entertainment, face painting and ice cream.

Michael Piscatelli, this year's Strawberry Festival and County Fair Chairman, would like to thank the North Fork Bank, its co-sponsor since 1998, the Mattituck Lions Club, countless families and friends, the Mattituck Lionesses and other community volunteers whom without their help, there would be no Strawberry Festival.

The North Fork Restaurants Critic's Choice

Bayview Inn & Restaurant–Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860s boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kids' menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrées, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island–Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrées, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04).

Cooperage Inn–With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame-crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the riga-

Over THE BARREL...

with Lenn Thompson

Sure Bets At Sherwood House

As the resident wine aficionado (or geek) at Dan's Papers, I'm "forced" to taste several wines each and every week. In just under a year with the paper, I've already filled up one whole notebook with notes and comments and have started another. It's hard work, but someone has to do it, right?

Through hundreds (thousands?) of sips, I've learned that when I taste a winery's new releases, I can almost always find at least one I enjoy. Just about every winery on Long Island has at least one noteworthy bottling, or at least something that shows potential. It's truly rare that I dislike everything I try. This week, as I sampled wines from Sherwood House Vineyards in Mattituck, something even more rare and extraordinary happened – both were remarkable and delicious. In fact, for the first time, each release scored an A- in my blind tasting.

Owned and operated by Charles and Barbara Smithen, Sherwood House Vineyards is the manifestation of an intense passion for both wine and the East End. A cardiologist and vintage jewelry dealer, respectively, they purchased their 1860 farmhouse in 1996 and planted their vines soon after. In 1999, after selling off their grapes to local wineries for a few years, the Smithens decided to make their own wine, a Chardonnay. Since then, they've focused solely on Merlot and Chardonnay, and have developed a bit of a following among those who have tasted them. After tasting these wines, I'm a believer, too.

The Sherwood House Vineyards 2001 Merlot ($22) is a well-extracted and rich example of Long Island's showcase varietal. The nose offers ripe raspberry aromas with a mineral background and light oakiness. On the palate, the raspberries are joined by vanilla cream and more minerals. This medium-bodied wine is highlighted by sultry tannins, a soft-but-rich mouthfeel and an indulgent, lingering finish. 600 cases were produced.

While garnering the same grade in my tasting, the Sherwood House Vineyards 2001 Chardonnay ($20) is even better. A light, shimmering gold in the glass, its nose is refined and light, offering Bosc pear, vanilla and hints of toast. Full-bodied but far from heavy, this exceptionally balanced chardonnay displays lithe pear flavors with hints of tropical fruit as well as butter, toast and minerals. I don't think there's a better 20-dollar chardonnay on the North Fork and few will cellar as well, either. 645 cases were produced.

Because they don't have their own tasting room yet, these wines are available for tasting and purchase at both The Tasting Room locations, one in Jamesport and one in Peconic, or at www.tastingroom.com. The Smithens do have plans for their own tasting room however, opening in the next 18 to 24 months.

Sherwood House Vineyards will also be releasing its 2002 Chardonnay in the fall and a 2002 Merlot in the early winter. They are also working on their first Cabernet Franc bottling, which will be released sometime in 2006.

For more information on Sherwood House Vineyards, visit www.sherwoodhousevineyards.com or call 298-2157.

The Fifth Season

45 Front Street
Greenport
477-8500

Forgive me if I indulge in a little rave. When I moved here from London some 13 years ago, Greenport was a town you drove through and probably would be uneasy walking around in after dark. Today it simply is delightful, with so many interesting stores, a beautiful and unspoiled waterfront, the charming Carousel, elegant hotels and some of the best restaurants on Long Island. Because of these nice restaurants, Erik and Jennifer Orlowski faced some tough competition when they decided to open their first restaurant in Greenport.

The Fifth Season looks small from outside, amid the adjacent buildings on Front Street, just east of the carousel, but when you enter, the first sensation is one of warmth and welcome. Then you also see that there is a tromp l'oeil quality because the restaurant internally is very deep. Soft yellow gold walls, featuring exhibits from local artists, blend perfectly with wood beams and a wood floor with crisply laid tables and comfortable, dark wood chairs. The kitchen is open, and one of the interesting features is the small number of 'Chef's tables for two.' High chairs are situated by the open kitchen. These are deliberately designed for diners to enjoy an interactive dining experience with the chef. Jennifer told us that these tables are usually the first to be booked.

The menu changes weekly, and is deliberately kept short, but there should be something for every taste, including vegetarians. Erik trained in Manhattan and previously cooked at the Manhattan City Club and Tuscan Square, as well as Sapore di Mare. He uses local produce wherever possible. The menu also features not only a recommended wine pairing with each dish but also a beer pairing. Beers are all from New York State and the wines are all from Long Island.

We chose the steamed mussels with a delicate but fragrant lemon, garlic and herb broth. They were truly excellent. The salt-crusted baguette from Connie's Bakeshop in Mattituck was just perfect for my habitual dunking. After all, what is the point of just eating the mussels and sending back all of that beautiful broth? We also ordered four very large garlic and lemon thyme crusted prawns that came on a bed of sweet corn and bean relish with a smoked bacon and tomato vinaigrette.

Sea bass tends to be a very welcome staple in many restaurants out here, but Erik's pan-roasted version served with braised leeks and shitake and oyster mushrooms is of the very highest. The Crescent Farm duck breast with a tart cherry demi glace and beautifully cooked selection of vegetables confirmed that Erik is a chef who truly believes in letting food speak for itself. His sauces are excellent, but they are there truly to complement and never to mask or overwhelm the intrinsic taste and texture of the dish. His very clean style of cooking is really to be commended. Nothing is heavy, and nothing is over the top. The chef demands to work with ingredients superb in quality and they were!

Desserts were magnificent. 'A Taste of Chocolate' mixed a small cup of chocolate milk shake with dark chocolate gelato and an unbeatable warm molten chocolate cake. Chocoholics must line up for this offering. Rhubarb is a humble, underestimated and often derided fruit, but here, it is braised and incorporated into an unbelievably crisp and light dessert. If it is on the menu go for it. If you can bypass the chocolate dish, or have them both, then get them both. You can take this recommendation from me, a guy who normally prefers some cheese and fruit to dessert!

The waitstaff is smartly dressed in dark shirts and long aprons. They are well trained and knowledgeable and added to the enjoyment of our meal.

Appetizers range from $8 to $13; main courses are from $19 to $29 and desserts are $8. The restaurant is open for dinner every day except Monday and reservations are recommended, especially on weekends.

The Fifth Season is a great addition to not just Greenport, but also to Long Island. Erik Orlowski is a truly talented chef and I have no doubt that reservations here are going to be increasingly hard to come by as more and more diners enjoy the ambience and the excellent food. Erik & Jennifer have sub-titled their restaurant as, "A Local Epicurean Experience" and I couldn't have put it any better myself – it really is something to rave about!

The Washwick Agency

Health Insurance Made Affordable

What happens when 2,000 self-employed business men and women, freelance artists, writers and other sole proprietors are brought together? They get group insurance rates that are far more affordable than they could ever get on their own, thanks to The Washwick Agency.

"Due to New York insurance laws, sole proprietors do not have the same access to affordably-priced medical and dental insurance as larger businesses," explained Karl Washwick, president of the Riverhead, Long Island-based agency. Many independent contractors, freelancers, and small businesses and their employees find insurance costs so exorbitant, that insurance expenses drain an excessive portion of their bottom line or, more frequently, they go without coverage all together.

With medical expenses soaring, people are taking high risks operating in business without proper insurance coverage. Many feel they have no choice.

"I am a small business so I understand the problems of small businesses," said Washwick, who founded the agency 25 years ago to meet the medical and dental insurance needs of an underserved, but significant population.

The Washwick Agency formed and acts as administrator of the Peconic Bay Business Association. By joining the association, the self -employed and their employees are eligible for group rate plans. Although based at the eastern tip of Long Island, the Peconic Bay Business Association provides its services to people working or residing in all of Long Island and all five boroughs of New York City.

By specializing in medical and dental insurance, Washwick feels his agency's efforts to get clients the best possible rates should stay undiluted." I don't do car insurance," Washwick laughed.

The Washwick Agency works closely with each client to best understand his or her insurance needs, and then helps choose the best of many available plans for that client. Each plan can offer a variety of baffling choices, such as HMOs, In-and-Out-of-Network plans and options for hospitalization and prescription co-pays, vision plans, and dependent child coverage. The Washwick Agency helps cut through the confusion. "I'll tell you the plans that are available, and the pros and cons of each," Washwick said.

The Washwick Agency also offers such "business solutions" as oversight of employee benefit plans and retirement savings plans.

The agency's mission is to provide clients with the best possible plan at the lowest possible cost. They promise to listen to your needs, sort through the maze of products and services available and help you choose what is most appropriate for you.

The Washwick Agency is located at 860 East Main Street in Riverhead, New York. For more information on their services call 369-0888 or visit their website at www.Washwick.com.

toni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Off-premises catering a specialty. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind–The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites such as crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry crème brulée is an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrées, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03).

La Plage–A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime/sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brulée.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar–Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. The Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage is very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrées, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepi's–Highly popular Northern Italian with dazzling views of Peconic Bay from inside tables and those on its patio. Tantalizing appetizers include calamari sautéed in a pungent marinara sauce and an inspired combo of roasted red peppers and anchovies. Entrees like cod marechiare, with fish and shellfish in a rich tomato cream broth served with pasta ensure no one goes home hungry. Pepi's is at the forefront of the organic food movement and recently has incorporated international organic wines, vodka and beer to the dining experience. Tiramisu tops the dessert list. Good selection of local wines. Entrées, $16-$20. Old Main Rd., Southold, 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 5/27/05).

Red Door–A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrées – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw–Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Soundview Inn–Picture windows overlook the Sound from every table. On the elevated outdoor deck, however, the tables actually hang over the Sound! Rachel Levin Murphy's restaurant takes in some of the best sunsets on the East Coast and also serves tasty fare in a relaxing environment. Plump and succulent steamers make a great starter as does chicken liver crostini for more adventurous tastes. Chef Kevin Rushkoski's leg of lamb in a rosemary reduction comes up tender and flavorful, without a trace of gaminess, and is accompanied by expertly wilted spinach. Desserts are collectively incredible. The somewhat abbreviated wine list is well selected and agreeably priced. Entrées $19.50-$27.50. North Road, Greenport. 477-0666. (Bradbrook 5/20/05).

Stonewall's–Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrées $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

Tuscan House–Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterful. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

Tweed's–Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London. Entrées $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Mr. and Mrs. Smith

In 1941, Alfred Hitchcock once again shocked moviegoers with his film Mr. and Mrs. Smith. However, this jolt to the audience came because it was a screwball comedy that featured a vitriolic battle of the sexes instead of his usual war on the nerves of his fans. The battling combatants were Carol Lombard and Robert Montgomery, who fought with choice cutting words. The current Mr. and Mrs. Smith is decidedly not a remake – it's more of á total annihilation of the notion that a married couple can wage the siege (that's referred to as connubial bliss) merely with words and, from time to time, a flying saucer or vase. This year's Mr. and Mrs are assassins for hire and would just as soon settle a spat with a high-powered automatic weapon or plastic explosive. Kiss-Kiss / Bang-Bang!

John and Jane Smith are played by – can you guess? Oh, of course, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie. You'd have to be buried under a sand dune in Napeague not to have heard the barrage of publicity concerning the young sons-o'-guns. And, yes, they are the talented interest in this ramblin' wreck of an action movie – suburban upper middle class homebodies with assault weapons stashed in the chintz-pillowed window nook. How sweet it is! The perfectly charming, beautifully appointed house, manicured lawn and John, returning each day to martinis and very small talk. Will the new drapes clash? But, we all know that a couple this sexy lookin', and Angelina's vibrating aura of strength has got to have some stuff going on. And, they do. Soon, marital bliss turns to a marital blast. Pow! Zoom! A trip to the moon, Alice. The honeymooners have fallen out of each other's arms and are armed and dangerous.

Cute as can be, the movie opens with a marriage counseling session as innocuous as their white picket fence and as transparent. Their evasive responses hint at a "McGuffin," Hitchcock's ticking time bomb-of-a-situation known by the audience. After we are given an overview of their background together like their first meeting in Bogota, Colombia dodging bullets – before you can say, "Bonnie and Clyde" the machine guns are out of the violin cases. Their secret, kept from each other, night jobs are out of the bag. Their once conjugal life together is now more dangerous than the Bogota jungle. Lock and Load! It's no joke. They slay each other or, at least, try to. To add to their lethal mating dance near misses, along come a bunch of men in black taking pot shots at them. Duck!

Angelina and Brad may be world class celebs but they are also damn fine actors when given the chance. Jumping around, dodging ammo takes a bit out of amore and acting too. This fine couple does fine, all things considered, except that the too-too, up-to-date, hip-hoppy, fast-paced, pain-in-the-butt over-used noise, both music and SFX, has them trying to keep their heads above a sea of director Doug Liman's pizzazz. There is so much pizzazz you may find yourself catching a few ZZZs in spite of all the cacophonous busy business.

So, dear movie goer, who wins the battle? Does Mr. or Mrs. Smith come out on top? As a virile, adult male (if you will), there is no contest. It's Angelina everytime. I don't think it's Brad's fault, particularly. Gee, it's not too different to Hitchcock's 1941 comedy. Carol Lombard has bones. Was Robert Montgomery too much of a gentleman? And, so it goes. Through the ages the battle of the sexes continues to heat up. Men used to call their wives "the ol' battleaxe." The weapon has escalated to "mass destruction" caliber and the caliber of the "he-man" seems diminished – as are their movies.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

CHOOSE YOUR MOVIE: BY DAVE EVANS

Batman Begins

The two earlier Joel Schumacher-helmed films may have seemed like the death throes of a franchise but here the decidedly edgier Christopher Nolan (director of Memento) attempts to resuscitate the Dark Knight. The camp is out as are big-jawed lead actors, replaced here with a very gothic Gotham and the leaner, more brooding Christian Bale.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith

Doug Liman's slick new action-comedy stars Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie as married assassins who discover that their next target is each other. At the very least, the film will give gossipmongers something to analyze after that oh-so-incriminating photograph of the two stars on the beach (they were almost, maybe, kind of holding hands!)

Madagascar

In the wait for Shrek 3 or The Incredibles 2, DreamWorks tries to make up for the wishy-washy Shark Tale with this animated tale of zoo animals unleashed in the wild. The talent which runs from Ben Stiller to Sacha Baron Cohen (aka Ali G) should guarantee that at least the jokes don't fall flat while the digital scenery looks as gaudy and wonderful as ever.

Star Wars Episode 3: Revenge of the Sith

The film the world has grown tired waiting for is finally here and for what it's worth, is the best of these prequels and the worthiest of the mythology. Lucas has promised this is the last we will see of his characters on the big-screen (though two television series are in the works) as he plans to return to making smaller 'art films'. Catch this before he makes the fatal move from disappointing to embarrassing.

Herbie Fully Loaded

In the age of the SUV the love bug may seem a puny competitor but Disney has gone all out with the return of everybody's favorite talking car. Herbie has been souped up, Lohan's chest has been digitally shrunk down but can either of these things balance out the ballast of co-star Michael Keaton who has not had a hit in over a decade?

Bewitched

Remake fever is alas not over just yet and Nicole Kidman seems not to have learned her lesson after last year's disastrous Stepford Wives. That said this boasts a solid supporting cast of Michael Caine, Will Ferrell and Shirley Maclaine along with an Ephron sisters script. Not to mention the quirky meta-plot, which sees a real witch, cast in a television remake of the original series.

The Perfect Man

Going head to head with her rival Lindsay Lohan's Herbie, this family-oriented romantic comedy casts Hilary Duff as the matchmaking daughter of Heather Locklear. Saccharine sentiment and 'heartwarming' comedy abound but it is the Melrose Place star's transformation from object of desire to frantic desperation that is truly intriguing.

Cinderella Man

Summer may be too breezy a time to unleash true drama on a public hungry for special effects and fireworks. As such Ron Howard's solid but serious film, charting Jim Braddock's phoenix-like 1935 victory over the then heavyweight champion, has taken an unfair beating at the box-office. Then again, perhaps the public is simply unwilling to fund Russell Crowe's random acts of violence on hotel employees any longer.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl

After Sin City, Robert Rodriguez swaps a screen awash with blood for a somewhat more varied palette in this kids action movie. The story was apparently written by Rodriguez's 7-year-old son so perhaps best not to hope for too much in that department but it's the flash and bang of it all that matters here and the film has it in spades.

review: ain't misbehavin at gateway playhouse

Most people of a certain age will be familiar with songs such as "Ain't Misbehavin", "Two Sleepy People" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" and some will know that the music for these came from one Thomas Waller, better known as "Fats." If you go to the Gateway Playhouse in Bellport before July 2nd, you will hear many, many more of Fats Waller's songs in this revue that ran for over 1600 performances on Broadway back in 1978.

Making a revue succeed is very difficult because it really is nothing more than a succession of songs, with no dialogue or story line and minimal scenery. The fact that this production really did get the place jumping is a tribute to the producers, stage managers and musical director but above all to a very talented cast who gave everything as they interpreted the varied moods that Fats Waller brought to his works.

You could not have dreamed up a more disparate looking set of artists, from the diminutive Laquet Sharnell with a voice that seems improbably large to the Fats Waller look-alike Wayne W. Pretlow, far from diminutive but who moved with deceptive grace and sang softly and sweetly when required.

The Harlem night club setting with upright piano, superbly played by Music Director William A. Knowles, was very evocative of the thirties, when Fats was in his heyday and created very different types of music for Downtown Manhattan and Harlem and then went on to be a great hit in Europe, before tragically dying of pneumonia at 39, after a life filled with excesses of all kinds. The costumes also really brought back the aura of those bygone days especially in "Lounging at the Waldorf."

After opening with an original Fats Waller recording, the show features over thirty songs that have been seamlessly woven together. The timeless "Ain't Misbehavin" featured all five artists before Wayne and NaTasha Yvette Williams launched into a stylized version of another classic, "Honeysuckle Rose." The mood then changed to seduction, with Aurelia Williams delivering a steamy request to "Squeeze Me," a request that would be very hard to deny!

Throughout the evening it was evident that this is a group of singers who really worked well together and the synergy was evident in "Jitterbug Waltz," a very different mood set, where the blending of the voices really brought a haunting quality. Poor NaTasha, left without a partner for the dance sequence, worked the audience well in search of someone to dance with, but no luck!

Andre Ward combined with Wayne Pretlow in a number of duets where their different physiques and vocal styles worked extremely well, but it was in "The Viper's Drag" that he really electrified the audience with his fascinating portrayal of a guy getting high. I must admit to wondering just what was in his smoke! The song is not subtitled "The Reefer Song" for nothing! Of course, the subject matter is doubtful but it was obvious throughout the evening that Fats and his lyric writers did not set out to be PC. Deriding your girlfriend's big feet or scorning someone as 'fat and greasy' probably wouldn't go down well if written today, and many of the lyrics must have been considered very risqué, back in those relatively innocent days before the Second World War.

The evening ended with a mélange of favorites after the company performed a song in a very different vein. In "Black and Blue" the subject of racial discrimination comes to the fore in asking why being a different color should bring with it sadness.

This show proved to be an absolute delight. Five very talented performers, together with a great pianist and band, showed us something of the genius of Mr. Thomas (Fats) Waller and filled the theater with fun, pathos, sensuality, satire and driving rhythms. The first night audience certainly showed their feelings as they gave the cast and musicians a very well deserved standing ovation.

review: no time for comedy...by jan silver

The sets are smashing, the costumes are 1930s alluring, the acting is pleasing – so what about the play? Amusing but dated. No Time For Comedy, S.N. Behrman's witty, brittle comment on marriage and war, just opened at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. It belongs to the genre of comedy known as drawing-room or comedy of manners.

S.N. Behrman (1893-1973) was a prolific playwright, essayist, screenwriter and member of the Dorothy Parker/Harold Ross/Robert Benchley set who traded ripostes at the famous Algonquin Hotel's "roundtable." As a playwright, Behrman is best known for light comedy but his contemporaries criticized him for writing such in an era of national troubles. No Time For Comedy, written in 1938, answered his critics: comedy as well as drama can provide perspective on politics.

We are living through an era with many national and international crises, but No Time For Comedy, seen at its final preview, doesn't contain much insight or enlightenment on current national or world problems. It does show, in the words of one character, how "sentimental, romantic and infantile" a playwright can be.

The above words describe Gaylord Easterbrook, played by Daniel Gerroll. Easterbrook, a successful playwright, is in a state of creative-manic throes trying to write a new play. His last three hit comedies have starred his wife, Linda Paige (Sharon Lawrence), but now he wants to write something serious. He is encouraged by a young, attractive Amanda Smith (Jennifer Mudge), married to an older, staid, dignified banker Philo Smith (Mark Blum). Linda, with Philo's nudge, quickly sees Amanda as a threat to her marriage as well as her husband's creativity.

Daniel Gerroll plays (and directs) Easterbrook, and he is more than "infantile." He is self-centered, self-indulgent and infuriating. Perhaps this is the way all very talented people behave, but it would make him insufferable to live with. Linda must love Gay very much to put up with his tantrums and dalliances.

Sharon Lawrence and Jennifer Mudge

Watching Gerroll and Lawrence spar, uttering Behrman's clever dialogue, is okay but his character is so one-dimensional, he becomes boring. Sharon Lawrence tries to humanize Linda, showing she really loves and cares about this child-man and will fight dirty to outmaneuver a challenger for his affections. At the beginning of the play, Linda states there are only two kinds of people in this world, "the brutes and the decent ones." She knows her Gaylord is a decent one.

Two other characters provide delightful comic relief for the dueling marriage partners. Gammy Singer is deadpan funny and all-knowing as Clementine, the Easterbrooks' maid. Edward Hibbert, the ladies' companion-in-waiting Makepeace "Pim" Lovell, interjects his character's dry wit and commentary into the dialogue with great body language and rapier precision.

Mark Blum plays the emotionally-subdued banker Philo Smith with dignified understatement. He is quite a contrast to Gerroll's histrionic Easterbrook. Jennifer Mudge plays Smith's wife Mandy with perfect, well-meaning naivety. Gabriel Nussbaum makes his Bay Street Theatre debut as the Smiths' butler, but his character has little to say.

Gary Hygom created two stunning sets for this production, the Easterbrooks' sophisticated Art Deco living room and the Smiths' elegant, traditional salon with brocade wallcovering, dark wood floors, comfy upholstery and Oriental rugs. Michael Krass' 1930s costumes are upper-class refined for the men and glamorous for the women. Brian Nason's lighting, and Tony Melfa and Roger Butterley's sound design augment the 1930s atmosphere. Paul Huntley devised the wigs for the women, and Sharon Lawrence's strawberry-blond hairdo is quite interesting.

The war references in No Time For Comedy are to the Spanish Civil War (1936-39). Gaylord Easterbrook mentions Picasso's masterpiece, "Guernica," and the "horror raining down on innocent people," but this is all really tangential to the play. Bay Street Theatre has provided good actors plus fine sets, costumes, and lighting. We are living through times that need comic relief. One wishes they had chosen a play that provided some.

No Time For Comedy plays through July 3 on Tuesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., matinees on Wednesdays at 2 p.m. and Saturdays at 4 p.m., and Sundays at 7 p.m. Tickets ($45-54) are available at the box office after 11 a.m. (631-725-9500) or online at www.baystreet.org

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

There is much good entertainment on the South Fork this week. Bay Street Theatre just opened the classic No Time for Comedy in Sag Harbor, and the Edwards Twins perform flawless superstar impersonations at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday. Guild Hall has a busy week: cabaret stars Barbara Carroll and Jeff Harnar on Friday, Broadway actors read Pushcart Prize-winning stories on Saturday, Broadway singers perform the music of Charles Strouse on Sunday, the foreign film series opens Tuesday, and cabaret favorite Andrea Marcovicci begins a three-night show next Thursday.

Other notable events: Kool & the Gang sing in Southampton on Sunday; the Perlman Music Camp is open on Shelter Island; and architect Daniel Libeskind speaks in Westhampton Beach next Thursday.

Andrea Marcovicci

This is an overloaded benefit weekend: Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation dinner dance at Wolffer Estate Vineyard (June 24, Sagaponack); Hamptons Home and Garden Show for Southampton Youth Services (June 24-26 at Southampton Recreation Center, Majors Path); Hampton Designer Showhouse opens as a fund-raiser for Southampton Hospital (June 25, 61 Down East Lane, Southampton); Artists Against Abuse dinner dance and auction for local domestic abuse victims' agency The Retreat (June 25, Bridgehampton Tennis & Surf Club); dinner dance for Love Heals, the Alison Gertz AIDS Foundation (June 25, Sagaponack); The Nature Conservancy's Beaches and Bays Gala (June 25, East Hampton); East End Hospice's dinner dance (June 25, Quogue); and the American Cancer Society's Ann Liguori Golf Classic (June 27-28, Westhampton Beach).

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre opens S.N.Behrman's No Time For Comedy this weekend. The classic, set in 1939, stars Daniel Gerroll, Sharon Lawrence, Mark Blum and Edward Hibbert. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 7 p.m., a matinee this Saturday at 4 p.m., and next Wednesday at 2 p.m. Tickets ($42-54) are at the Sag Harbor box office, 631-725-9500, or online at www.baystreet.org.

The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall, East Hampton, presents an evening of Pushcart Press prize-winning stories read by actors Marcia Gay Harden, Samantha Mathis, Keri Russell, Andrew McCarthy and Bob Balaban on Saturday at 8 p.m. The evening celebrates Pushcart Press' 30th anniversary. Tickets are $45 or $100 for a V.I.P reception with the actors following the readings; call the box office at 631-324-4050.

This is the last weekend to see the Hampton Theatre Company's production of the Tina Howe drama Painting Churches. Performances are Thursday through Saturday, 8 p.m., and Sunday at 5 p.m. Tickets ($10-20) are available at the Quogue Community Hall box office (631-653-8955) or online at hamptontheatre@optonline.net.

MUSIC

Guild Hall has a double-header this weekend. On Friday, master jazz pianist/vocalist Barbara Carroll will perform, along with special guest Jeff Harnar (7:30 p.m.; tickets $40-45). On Sunday, also at 7:30 p.m., Lee Davis' and Patricia Watt's American Musical Theatre salutes Charles Strouse, composer of Annie, Bye Bye Birdie, and Applause. Broadway performers Rachel York, Eric Michael Gillett and Charles Strouse himself will be onstage ($45-50). Cabaret star Andrea Marcovicci comes in June 30 through July 2 with her new show "Andrea Sings Astaire" ($53-55). Tickets to all are available at the box office, 631-324-4050.

The Edwards Twins, Anthony and Edward, are well-known for their dead-ringer impersonations of Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond, Elton John, Billy Joel, Sonny & Cher and others. Who will they be onstage at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center this Saturday at 8:30 p.m.? For tickets ($35-60), 288-1500.

The smooth-singing rock band Kool & The Gang will perform at the Elks Lodge, Montauk Highway, Southampton, on Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Gates open at 6 p.m. General admission is $25 (bring your own chair or blanket) or $60 for a reserved seat with refreshments. Tickets are sold at all TicketMaster locations.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

EUGENE BRODSKY AT BUTLER'S FINE ART

It's hard to pinpoint Eugene Brodsky's influences and/or references. Some work recalls Jean-Michel Basquiat's and Keith Haring's endeavors during the 1980s: graffiti, gestures, scratches, and scribbles.

While many people don't give credence to this kind of art, the artists were responsible for salient statements reflecting and/or disputing the decade's political and social preoccupations.

Mr. Brodsky's intentions are obviously different, although his gestural configurations and graffiti-like forms can't be denied. What is unique about his work, therefore, is his execution.

According to the artist's explanation, such a process involves making linear drawings which are "also transposed to silkscreen. Images are then reversed as they were printed on the reverse side of the glass. The two versions, the looser, more spontaneous, and the rigid and clean, were then registered and joined together with wooden clamps."

We especially respond to the last description: the juxtaposition of the gestural drawings' spontaneity with the more defined geometric abstractions evoked by the silkscreen designs. One specific work highlights the precise silkscreen shapes with images of cell-like links spread out around the piece's border. The impression signifies designs located in nature versus ones found in man-made endeavors.

"NB Glass Painting," by E. Brodsky

Mr. Brodsky's series, featuring various images mounted on block-like forms, represents a more intellectual approach. The viewer looks for connections between the diverse individual illustrations. With names like "House/Ceiling/Feet/Dome," it's often difficult to discern the meaning, however. The fact that the blocks form their own design, some vertically placed, some horizontally arranged, is another obstacle to "reading" the artist's intention. For example, how do the disparate figures relate to each other?

There are exceptions. The very title of "Storyboard" allows us to grasp how we should interpret the configuration. The term "storyboard" connotes a narrative; in this case, it is probably a non-linear plot where chronology is absent, where events or impressions are vertically constructed so that meaning becomes "What goes with what," rather than the more linear meaning of "What follows what."

This non-linear structure reminds us of works by Stephanie Brody Lederman. Her pieces are somewhat autobiographical, and we wonder if Mr. Brodsky's series is also personal. And like a stream-of-consciousness. How else can we connect images looking like footprints, fences, and phallic symbols?

The show will be on view at East Hampton's Butler's Fine Art until the end of June.

Honoring the Artist: Carole Saxe

As far back as artist Carole Saxe can remember, she has had an affinity for dogs (as the cover shows). And art. And science. And architecture (as the cover doesn't show).

While these diverse interests have always figured into Ms. Saxe's life, the idea that dogs are not only subjects for art but metaphors for life is a primary preoccupation. For example, Ms. Saxe says she has met most of her good friends here through dogs, meeting fellow owners when they were walking their pets on the beach, particularly Wyborg Beach, this week's cover site.

Moreover, Ms. Saxe quickly observes that her dogs are usually engaged in various activities, playing in the water, sitting by an umbrella, and generally getting along with each other. "Wouldn't it be wonderful if people got along like dogs did?" she asks. Who can argue with such a point? We might add our own observation here: the canines each seem to have charming and loveable personalities. Wouldn't it be wonderful if humans did, too? Or as Ms. Saxe puts it, "Dogs have hearts of pure joy."

Yet Ms. Saxe has another connection to dogs. She was an active member of a New Jersey animal rescue organization and is hoping to continue her commitment on the East End where she has lived for the last several years. (For example, ARF will be using one of her images in a forthcoming calendar.)

Most importantly, however, Ms. Saxe sees her paintings of dogs as a vehicle for "calling something my own."

Ms. Saxe has called other subject matter her own as well. "I'm really interested in architecture and seascapes, too," she notes. "I've made paintings of local sites, like Rowdy Hall, and I loved creating paintings featuring architectural details, like storefronts and railings in Paris."

We can't help but notice, however, the differences between dogs and Parisian railings. "I think if I did one topic exclusively, I would get bored or tired," Ms. Saxe answers honestly and with conviction.

What about her interest in science? How did that figure into the scheme of things? "I actually wanted to be a weatherman at one point," Ms. Saxe says. "I took a test in college that indicated I was very strong in science and weak in art. I decided to change majors and study art anyway."

"When I started at the University of Michigan, women were supposed to be mothers and not pursue a profession like art. By the time I graduated, things were different. Thank goodness."

Ms. Saxe pauses for a rare moment, continuing with " I remember seeing a painting by May Stevens in a New York Gallery, and I realized there was something so important about the work. I was filled with such emotion. I realized that art was my calling."

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The green shelled garden pea is just one of a variety of edible peas that are literally here today and gone tomorrow. The vegetable needs warmth but not heat and so its tiny time frame is from late spring to early summer. An ancient vegetable, it is known to have existed from seeds since 5000 BC. Green peas eaten fresh were a later variety and in 17th century France, peas were refined into the most desirable kind we have today, the tender sweet petit pois.

Peas are like sweet corn – their sugars begin to convert to starch immediately after picking and unless we are growing them ourselves or buy them from a farmer who picks them as we wait, we will miss that "sweet garden pea taste" that we can only fantasize about.

Today in the United States most of the pea crop is canned or frozen. For some inexplicable reason either one is not objectionable. Preferences, however, lean toward the frozen variety. Not to be deprived of this gentle vegetable, I often use the frozen variety of petit pois peas in my cooking. A luscious but simple risotto with a puree of peas, shallots, white wine and a dusting of Parmesan cheese brought to that wonderful moment when the al dente rice kernels are suspended in the creamy sauce is divine. Combine fresh, if available, or frozen peas with garden fresh snow pea pods, scallions, and mint for a tasty classic or a simple blanched snow pea pod appetizer with sesame seeds. Snow peas and sugar snaps are readily available at our local farmer's markets and farm stands.

BLANCHED SUGAR SNAP PEAS WITH SESAME

Look for relatively small pods that are crisp, select them carefully and use within a day or two.

Serves 5-6

1/2-2/3 pound fresh sugar snap peas
Coarse (Kosher) salt
1 tablespoon toasted (dark) sesame oil
1 tablespoon toasted black sesame seeds

1. Snap the stem end of the peas then gently pull down on both sides of the peas to string them. In a 2 or 3 quart saucepan, bring about 1 1/2 quarts water to the boil; put in the peas and blanche for 1 - 1 1/2 minutes. Drain in a colander and immediately run the peas under cold running water to stop the cooking. Spread on a clean kitchen towel and pat gently to dry thoroughly. Can be prepared ahead to this point. Refrigerate covered as necessary.

2. Place the sugar snap peas in a bowl and add sesame oil and sesame seeds to your taste. Toss to coat. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Can be prepared up to several hours ahead. Serve at room temperature.

Note: Can use white or black sesame seeds. Just be sure to toast them in a dry non-stick skillet for a couple of minutes to bring out their flavor.

RISOTTO WITH PEAS AND PARMESAN

Here the peas are pureed to stir into the creamy risotto.

Serves 4

1 10 ounce package frozen petit pois peas
5 1/2 – 6 cups chicken stock, preferably homemade, or low-fat-low-sodium canned
2 inner ribs of celery, trimmed, washed, diced
2 large shallots, finely chopped
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil (plus extra for serving)
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 1/2 cups Carnarole rice (Arborio type rice)
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Defrost peas and place about two-thirds in a food processor and puree. Reserve both pea puree and whole remaining peas.

2. Put the stock in a saucepan, bring to a boil and keep warm at a gentle simmer.

3. In a large enamel iron casserole, such as le Creuset, melt the butter with the oil. When hot, put in the celery and shallots and sauté over medium heat for 4-5 minutes.

4. Add the rice to coat in the vegetable mixture and sauté for 2-3 minutes longer to dry the rice. Pour in the wine and bring to a boil. Simmer the mixture until the wine evaporates. Season with salt and pepper and stir to mix.

5. Add 3/4 cup of the hot stock and stir into the rice, continue to stir until all the liquid is absorbed. Continue adding stock, 3/4 cup at a time, stirring constantly to prevent the rice from sticking. About 15 minutes after you started to add the stock, stir the pea purée into the rice. Continue to ladle in 3/4 cup stock until the rice kernels are suspended in a creamy sauce, about 22-25 minutes total cooking time. Add the cheese and whole peas and stir into the mixture. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and serve promptly. The rice will retain its heat for 5-10 minutes. Never reheat risotto or rice will become sticky and lose its creamy texture.

SWEET SHELL PEAS WITH SCALLIONS AND MINT

Combine snow pea pods and garden peas, fresh or frozen in this classic recipe for delicious results.

Serves 6

1/2 pound snow pea pods, strings removed
1/2 pound shell peas, shelled or a 10-ounce package frozen peas
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
4-5 scallions, trimmed, rinsed and thinly sliced
1/2 cup low-fat-low-sodium chicken or vegetable broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons julienne of fresh mint leaves

1. Rinse snow peas and pat dry with paper towel. Shell pod peas or defrost frozen peas.

2. Put oil in a non-stick skillet and when hot but not smoking put in the scallions. Sauté scallions about 1 1/2 - 2 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add snow peas and shell or frozen peas. Stir to mix and saute with the scallions for a couple of minutes. Add broth. Salt and pepper to taste. (Remember canned broth is salty, even low-sodium broth.) With cover ajar, let vegetables simmer about 3-4 minutes or until tender. Place the mint leaves over the vegetables. Can be prepared ahead to this point.

3. Just before serving bring mixture to a simmer, heat through and serve.

From Grapes to Wine

If there was ever any doubt concerning the popularity of wine, the recent success of Sideways has surely put it to rest. When soon to be wed Jack says, "If they want to drink Merlot, we're drinking Merlot," his friend Miles responds. "No, if anyone orders Merlot, I'm leaving. I am NOT drinking any f Merlot!" Clearly, among other things, the film demonstrates the increasing number of wine connoisseurs and fledglings who have not only developed an appreciation for wine, but a steadfast devotion. However, wine making is a complex undertaking, and at the base of the whole process, is, of course, a wide variety of grapes.

While grapes may be traced back to as many as 8000 years, there are today over 60 varieties cultivated for wine making and over 50 varieties of table grapes. It has been said that the popularity of grapes in the U.S. has had a lot to do with Franciscan monks, who over 200 years ago brought grapes to California for the purpose of making sacramental wine. As demand grew, more grape varieties were introduced. Forty years later, the first vineyard for table grapes was planted.

Grapes are small round or oval berries that feature semi-translucent flesh encased by a smooth skin. Some contain edible seeds while others are seedless. Like blueberries, grapes are covered by a protective, whitish bloom. Grapes that are eaten as is or used in recipes are referred to as table grapes. Wine grapes are those used in viniculture. The last group is the raisin grapes, used to make dried fruit. Grapes may be further classified as red, blue, or white (which are actually pale green in color). Each kind has its own distinct character.

Grapes, like fruit trees, require a stable climate to grow properly. The area surrounding the Finger Lakes is great for grape production because of the moderating effect that these large bodies of water have on the weather. For this reason, vineyards are found in abundance there, especially along the southern shores of the Finger Lakes.

Grapes used to make table wine must have relatively high acidity and moderate sugar content; those used for dessert wines and other sweet wines must have high sugar content and moderate acidity. Table grapes must be low in both acidity and sugar content and must conform to definite standards of size, color, and shape. Grapes used to make juices and jellies must have a pronounced flavor combined with high acidity and moderate sugar content. Raisin grapes are preferably seedless, with high sugar content and low acidity. European varieties are considered superior to eastern U.S. varieties for use in table wines, table grapes, dessert wines, and raisins; eastern U.S. grapes are preferred for juices and jellies.

The combination of crunchy texture and dry, sweet, tart flavor has made for a growing market for fresh grapes. They are great as a snack or as a refreshing addition to both fruit and vegetable salads. American varieties are available in September and October, while European varieties are available year-round. With a one cup serving having only approximately 57 calories, 6 grams of protein, 16 grams of carbohydrates, 2 mg of sodium, 1 gram of dietary fiber and vitamins A and C, they are ideal for any weight-conscious Hampton denizen.

Besides being relatively low in calories, grapes offer many other health benefits. Just like most fruits, grapes contain beneficial compounds called flavonoids, which are photochemicals that give the vibrant purple color to grapes, grape juice and red wine; the stronger the color, the higher the concentration of flavonoids. Much evidence shows that these flavonoids decrease the risk of heart disease and various types of cancer.

Grapes and the wines they produce are without a doubt intricate sciences and people have spend lifetimes studying and exploring them. However, if you are looking for a quick education fix, Windows on the World Wine School (New York Marriott Marquis, 1535 Broadway, at 45th Street 845-255-1456; wowws.com), is a great place to start. The school has a long well established history, and always feels like a party, with 125 people gathered to slurp-and-spit $4,000 worth of wine in the course of eight weeks. The course is designed to help each student sort through his or her own senses of taste and smell.

Another worthy route is wine tours, and there is no better place than Long Island wine country. A great place to begin your exploration is at the Wölffer Estate in Sagaponack (631-537-5106), one of the country's most elegant wineries.

Granita, the Elegant Italian Ice

When summer comes and the heat becomes too much to bear, there are only a few things that can cool you off – a dip in the pool or ocean, air conditioning, and best of all, a gigantic ice cream cone. But while swimming is a guilt-free activity, eating ice cream certainly is not. Enter granita, a Sicilian specialty that is a cross between an Italian ice and a frozen drink. A healthier option than ice cream, this coarse-textured ice confection is the perfect summer dessert for many reasons.

Over the years, I have made several desserts for the various parties my family hosts in the summer. I've made complicated cakes with more ingredients than there are letters in the alphabet, frozen cakes that melted as I tried to prepare them, cakes that required hours upon hours to make, and of course, the occasional cake that tasted like cardboard. As my family can attest, this baking hobby of mine has led to major meltdowns on more than one occasion. I don't deny it, but I can't help it. While I know I shouldn't break down when my creation doesn't look exactly like the one in the magazine, I just sometimes feel that my efforts won't be appreciated if it doesn't look perfect. And I don't find it unreasonable to be on the verge of tears after finding that my father couldn't resist tasting the cake before it was served, leaving a noticeable mark in the icing.

But lately, I've been realizing that there is no need for minor tantrums over sugar. Not because they aren't justified, but because I've found desserts that are so simple to make that I don't even mind if someone sneaks a taste. Desserts that don't require perfection and that let single ingredients shine have become my new obsession. One such dessert is granita.

It's perfect because it requires few ingredients, little equipment and not much effort.

Essentially, granita is a water ice that has a more granular texture than a standard ice or sorbet. To make this refreshing snack, you simply mix a few ingredients together, mainly sugar and water, and then freeze, whisking occasionally to get the right texture. Coffee and lemon are the most popular flavors, but it is easy to substitute summer fruits for a new twist on this classic dessert. Using strawberries or watermelon to flavor your granita is an excellent way to take advantage of the season. It can be served in a glass with whipped cream or placed in a cold beverage, such as an iced espresso. Or, do as the Italians do, and have it for breakfast with biscotti.

I mixed up a watermelon granita last summer, and I fully intend to try a few new recipes this summer. The granita was a classy yet simple finish to a delicious dinner. And while I sometimes work so hard to make a dessert that I would rather just display it than eat it, I had no trouble asking for seconds with this one.

So when you are looking to impress your guests with a homemade dessert but would prefer to spend the day baking on the beach instead of in a sweltering kitchen, choose granita. Cool, easy, delicious – there's nothing better. Try this recipe the next time you have company – or make it for yourself alone!

Coffee Granita (Serves 8)

4 cups freshly brewed strong coffee (made from 6 cups water and 2 1/2 cups ground French roast coffee)
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon sambuca or other anise-flavored liqueur

For the garnish

Orange peel strips or chocolate-covered coffee beans
Whipped cream

Stir first 4 ingredients in bowl until sugar dissolves. Pour into 13x9x2-inch metal pan. Chill 2 hours; mix in sambuca. Freeze coffee mixture until icy at edge of pan, about 45 minutes. Whisk to distribute frozen portions evenly. Freeze again until icy at edge of pan and overall texture is slushy, about 45 minutes. Whisk to distribute frozen portions evenly. Then freeze until solid, about 3 hours. Using fork, scrape granita down length of pan, forming icy flakes. Freeze at least 1 hour. (Can be made 1 day ahead. Cover; keep frozen.)

To Serve

Working quickly, scoop granita into glasses, filling halfway. Fill to top with whipped cream. Garnish with peel or coffee beans.

TUSCAN HOUSE
Regional Italian Cuisine

Welcome to the Tuscan House

Executive chef William Oster founder and creator of the Tuscan House in Riverhead has moved the restaurant, and is pleased to announce that he will be reopening the new Tuscan House in Southampton located on the corner of Jobs and Windmill lane. Billy has made it his life's work to make your dining experience authentic and enjoyable. He frequently travels back to Italy, actively cooking, and researching the food, wines, and ingredients throughout the many regions. Bringing back these old world classics for you to enjoy, what we call the true flavors of Italy. We are humbled by his opportunity, and look forward to serving you and being part of your community.

We will keep you updated of all our progress each week as we get closer to opening. We thank all of our patrons for your many years of dining with us, and look forward to serving you for many more.

Thank you again,

Almond

1970 Montauk Highway
Bridgehampton, NY
631-537-8885

Sunday evening found the airy dining rooms of Almond bustling, and Derek and I passed the spacious bar where a few solitary diners took their supper. We settled in to a table in the middle of the room overlooking a wall of wide windows. Skylights, ceiling fans, a creative cork ceiling, and brushed marigold walls combined to make up the bright ambience of the restaurant. The paintings that hung on the walls were colorful, happy collages.

Our waiter presented us with a wine list, boasting various choices of Champagnes, as well as an array of red and whites. I selected the Domaine Cros 2001 Pinot Noir, and the deep red wine splashed into elegant glasses.

The appetizers were all tempting, but I opted for the special soup of the day. It was a Potato Leek soup with rock shrimp. It was lighter and more summery than I expected. Derek found it too salty for his taste, though I savored the flavor. The tender rock shrimp was fantastic and added substance to the steaming broth. Derek ordered another evening special – a soft shell crab tempura served over roasted bell peppers. The meat was soft and the exterior was crunchy, exactly the way a soft shell crab should be. This was absolutely delicious; I just couldn't keep my fork to myself.

After the first course was cleared away, the chef sent out a special treat from the raw bar. The chilled lobster was cut for ease of sharing, and the meat from the tail and claw was sumptuous. There was also shrimp on ice and a few slippery clams, which were obviously straight out of the Atlantic. The seafood platter was beautiful, framed by a seaweed wreath and ready to be devoured.

After the amount of food we had already enjoyed, I was surprised that I still had room for entrées. But the appetizers and seafood were light and savory – not too filling.

The steak frites and the bistro-inspired Shrimp Po Boys both offered seductive options, but we were both delighted with what we ordered.

Derek chose a roasted chicken that was marinated in its own tangy juices. It's a classic dish, but was perfectly prepared with crispy skin and tender meat. Atop the chicken rested a beautiful array of fresh, crunchy marinated string beans, and the dish was served over a bed of creamy "crushed" potatoes with their red skins still on.

I ordered the grilled salmon fillet, which I asked for rare. A julienne of cucumbers draped across the top of the fillet, adding even more freshness to the fresh, light fish. It was served over a creative Israeli cous-cous with yellow pepper and mint, and was surrounded by shrimp oil. The waiter checked on us periodically throughout the meal to find us happily devouring our dinner.

When the empty plates were taken away, I looked over the dessert menu, but couldn't imagine squeezing another morsel into my stomach. We passed up the strawberry rhubarb a la mode, which was tough for me, and the chocolate peanut butter brownie, which was tougher for Derek, and opted instead for a strong cup of espresso for me and a steaming cup of coffee for him.

One would think that the chef at Almond would go heavy on the nuts in his cooking. But while there are a few almond-inspired specials, the name actually came from a woman. I heard the rumor before, but didn't believe it until I heard it from the source. The restaurant is co-owned by two men, Jason Weiner and Eric Lemonides, who have been friends since childhood. Jason is the chef and Eric is the manager. Jason has a girlfriend by the name of Almond, and they decided it was such a lovely name that it would also be the name of their restaurant. It seems to have worked, because Almond, a relaxing French bistro, has been a success since it first opened in 2001. This year, its sister restaurant, the chic and hopping Almondito, opened its doors to flocking loyal customers. For anyone who is looking for uniquely prepared, fresh, and delectable food in a casual yet elegant setting, Almond is an excellent choice.

Almond is located just west of Bridgehampton Commons, and is open for dinner seven days a week. Entrees range from $16 to $22.

Bananas: Not Just A Woody Allen Movie

In tropical regions, banana plantations unfold like corn in our own heartland, coating the hillsides with fruit-bearing groves. As they blossom, bananas open like flowers and then form into the fruits with which we are familiar. Bananas grow in "hands," each of which consists of 10-20 "fingers." And banana trees are actually not trees at all, but giant herb plants. The bark around the trunk is a fibrous material, and the heart of the trunk is a white tube that can be cooked, acquiring a taste and texture like bamboo shoots.

Banana production is integral to the economy of many tropical countries. Central America in particular is dependent on banana production. Because of its proximity to North America, a leading banana consumer, Central American countries like Honduras, Ecuador, Costa Rica and Panama consider bananas their major export. The United States imports over 15 billon bananas every day.

Bananas are very healthy, and are one of the leading sources of potassium. They are also the third most popular fruit in the world, after apples and oranges. Interestingly, bananas give off ethylene gas, which can help ripen green tomatoes and avocadoes. So the next time there are no ripe avocadoes in the supermarket, buy an unripe one and set it on the counter next to a bunch of bananas. It will ripen much faster.

The most common variety of banana consumed in the United States is the Cavendish banana, which is between six and 10 inches long and has a yellow peel when ripe. Baby bananas, which look very much like the Cavendish ones only are much smaller, are sweeter than their bigger cousins. They usually don't reach more than three inches long, but they still have the nutritional benefits of larger bananas. They are also known as "ladyfingers" or "Niño bananas." They are perfect for slicing on your granola or putting in your yogurt.

Another variety of banana, which is absolutely beautiful and grows abundantly in Costa Rica and Jamaica, is the red banana. I only laid eyes on these stout purplish fruits a few months ago in Costa Rica. Their flesh is a light pink color and they are much sweeter than Cavendish, and even sweeter than baby bananas. At their peak ripeness, they usually have some black spots on their purplish skin. Most often, they are used in baking. Red bananas are also known as Jamaican bananas. Now that I've seen them once, I seem to see them everywhere. Red bananas are available at King Kullen and other local markets.

Plantains are less common in the United States, but they are a staple in Latin American cooking. They are longer and flatter than Cavendish bananas. They are less sugary than other bananas, but in turn, more starchy. In fact, all bananas are fairly starchy when unripe, and as they ripen, the starch turns to sugar. Plantains, with their harder, firmer texture, maintain the starchy texture and taste for longer. They are used more as a vegetable or a potato than a fruit, and are often fried, mashed, or stewed. The skin starts out green, and ripens to yellow and sometimes black. Just like other bananas, if it is allowed to ripen enough, the starch will eventually turn to sugar, and it will be suitable for desserts.

With their solid consistency, bananas seem more substantial than other fruits. Because of this, they offer a healthy alternative to some of our favorite cravings, namely ice cream. I have a friend who started a banana smoothie business. His secret? Pretty much as straightforward as you can get: frozen bananas, mashed up. Nothing added, nothing taken away.

One of my all-time favorite snacks is platanos fritos – fried plantains. Add a hint of lime into the mix, and you have a delicious alternative to potato chips.

Deep-Fried Plantain Rounds (4 servings) :

Ingredients

2 green plantains
2 cups vegetable oil salt and pepper to taste
lime

Directions

1. Peel plantains and cut into 2-inch rounds.
2. Heat the oil in a small saucepan until hot but not smoking. Drop the plantain rounds into the hot oil 3 or 4 at a time and cook until well browned, 2 to 3 minutes. Remove and drain.
3. Set each fried plantain on a flat side, and using a rolling pin or frying pan, squash it as flat as you can. It should have a circular shape.
4. Return the flattened plantain sections to the hot oil 3 or 4 at a time and cook until the entire surface is golden brown, about 2 minutes. Remove the plantains from the oil, drain, and season liberally with salt and pepper. Squeeze the lime over the plantains. Serve hot or at room temperature.

Hamptons Home & Garden Expo

If you're looking to do some sprucing up around the house this summer, or even conduct a complete home overhaul, you're in luck. This weekend, the first ever Hamptons Home and Garden show descends upon Southampton. The expo will serve as a benefit for Southampton Youth Services and will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Southampton Town Recreation Center on Majors Path. The expo is focused on home and garden trends, with an art and design focus, and a unique educational aspect. The pioneer event is expected to draw thousands of homeowners from all over the Hamptons, who'll have an opportunity to meet with hundreds of craftsmen, gardening experts, and artists as well as attend seminars by many esteemed design professionals.Vendors range from pressure washers and air conditioning technicians, to Sleepy's in Southampton who'll be featuring their $25,000 V-Spring Mattress. A Trend Pavilion will be set up featuring hot home trends of Summer 2005. Among the many exclusive items scheduled to be highlighted are a giant home theatre installation and a personal putting green for the yard. Custom furniture, glass blown lighting fixtures and high tech sound systems will also flank the Trend Pavilion.

$25,000 matress from Sleepy's

Where else but the Hamptons could you find a home and garden show where you can stroll the aisles feasting on East End lobster and clams on the half shell? If all that doesn't seem over the top enough, Mercedes Benz will be there in case folks get the urge to upgrade what's currently parked in the driveway.

The Show's Conference Chair, Natalie Weinstein, has 30 years experience as an interior decorator, is a radio talk show host on WLIE, and a columnist. President of Natalie Weinstein Design Associates, based in St James, Natalie has serviced countless residences in the tri-state area and Florida since 1973, as well as offices, catering facilities, car dealerships and other corporate commissions.

For those interested in fresh, do-it-yourself home and garden ideas as well as interesting topics like Feng Shui, a platform will be set up where speakers will lecture throughout the show. Many East End authors and garden experts, including Louisa Hargrave and Ray Smith, will conduct dynamic workshops and seminars on improving your home environment. Don't miss the welcome and opening keynote panel: 5 Things You Must Know Before You Begin Decorating, Remodeling or Landscaping, by Natalie Weinstein and Scott Clark.

For those with an interest in art and landscaping you will want to catch Natalie Weinstein's interview with the legendary Robert Dash, Conservationist, Naturalist, Painter, and owner of Madoo Conservatory. Other interesting seminar topics include How to Use Color, by world renowned interior designer Roderick Shade, and Secrets to Effective Organic Gardening, by Lauren Jarrett, EECO Farms. Fashion gurus, be sure to hit Decorating Fads and Fashion: What's Hot and What's Not in the Hamptons this Summer, by Natalie Weinstein.

Not all glitz and glamour, the Hamptons Home and Garden show was designed as an alternative way for many of Long Island's hard-working trade professionals to gain the exposure that only a storefront for the weekend provides. "Many local vendors don't have a Main Street address. This show provides them with guaranteed foot traffic," said Rick Friedman, President and founder of The Hamptons Expo Group. "Given the importance of home improvement in the Hamptons, it made sense to create a showcase of home and garden suppliers eager to serve local homeowners."

25 local artists have been given the chance to showcase their work to the thousands of show attendees expected during the weekend. All artist booths were given at a 90% discount (to the normal local vendor price) to help support the burgeoning art scene on the East End, providing exposure for some of the many talented painters, sculptors, and design students who live and work here. A portion of the proceeds will go to Southampton Youth Services.

Hamptons Expo Group is founded and run by Rick Friedman, a Southampton homeowner. Mr. Friedman has over 15 years of experience in producing and staging successful Expos and Conferences around the world. His many large-scale events in the computer and filmmaking industries are considered renowned marketplaces where both buyers and sellers benefit.

The event/benefit will take place June 24th from 5 to 9 p.m., June 25th from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and June 26th from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is $20. For more information, call 631-283-5505, or visit www.hhgshow.com. The Southampton Town Recreation Center is located at 1370A Majors Path, in Southampton.

Your Studio by the Sea

The East End has long been one of the most famous artists' colonies in America and the world. There's something about the sea and open farmland that has inspired everyone from William Merritt Chase to Pollock and Warhol. We're still inundated with a creative population that far exceeds the few world class successes that actually make a solid living from their work. It's hard to drive through Springs or Sagaponack and not get a little romantic about our rich history in the arts. To fantasize about smoking unfiltered cigarettes and swilling whiskey in a rustic studio while pouring out aggressive paintings, or wearing khakis and a white oxford shirt and setting up an easel on the beach is natural for many of us. There's nothing wrong with it, and there's even less wrong with actually making the fantasy real. You don't need to be Schnabel or Bleckner or deKooning to enjoy expressing yourself. Studios By the Sea by Jonathan Becker and Bob Colacello documents some of the best and most famous work spaces on the island, with exciting pictures and informative text. It's intimidating, but it's also a fantastic inspirational tome for those of us who fancy setting up shop to make art in this lovely Hamptons setting.

Creating a studio isn't as hard as it seems, and once it's done, a budding artist is much more likely to actually roll up his/her sleeves and work. Ideally, you'll want to find a space with natural light. Sunlight helps show colors as they truly are, as well as illuminating subject matter for photographs, video, or figurative and still life painting. The recently deceased abstract expressionist sculptor Ibram Lassaw's studio in Springs was lit only by the sun.

Windows along the ceiling of the building accepted the daylight, and when the sun set, his day was done. Not all would-be artists like or have time to work during the day, but the option should be there. A separate garage or a basement with enough windows makes for a perfect environment without disturbing the order of your home. Most artist materials have at least a few toxic chemicals, and ventilation is important. Oil and spray paint, lacquers, solvents, sawdust, and other irritants are harmful with extended exposure. You want to stay healthy and put in the required time for breaking down inhibitions and getting to the meat of your work. Getting loaded on paint fumes doesn't count as uninhibited, so forget it.

Once you've got a space and some windows and a fan to keep the air clean, you'll need to fill it. Depending on how much room you have, it's not a bad idea to bring in a comfortable chair or two, and a coffee table (however rough) to converse with friends and entertain potential buyers. You'll also want to simply sit and consider what it is you hope to accomplish without the distraction of leaving your new sanctuary. Plug in a coffee machine, and maybe stash a bottle or two of your favorite spirits. A small refrigerator will also ensure that food and beverages will be close at hand. Staying with your work and basking in the energy you've exerted is key to maintaining a creative flow.

Now all you have to do is put in whatever it is you need to facilitate your work. Pollock painted on the floor, but you might want an easel or even a wall that can accommodate larger canvases or paper. A nice big worktable can be built with some plywood and a few 2x4s, and will be essential for laying out tools, supplies, and smaller works. If you don't have great light, or want to paint into the night, buy a few good, bright adjustable lamps. Aiming light in different ways at your art can change its appearance. Fool around with it before showing friends and collectors.

Last, don't be afraid to spice up the room with anything that inspires you. Maybe the more minimal the better for you, but if not, books, music, and knick knacks can help bring out what you're striving for and make the room feel like home. Basquiat painted while watching TV, putting pieces of what he saw in much of what he did. Whatever works. Be selfish. This is a place that is 100 percent about you. Don't change it for anyone. If you can't make a studio, lack of square footage shouldn't stop you. Work on the kitchen table, work outside, work in your car. It doesn't matter. Just work.

You Can Take It With You

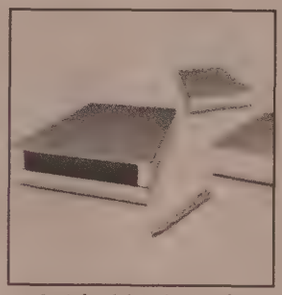
"Born in a place where mansions come easy, and money's real long but it don't come easy," Flizzy thunders into the mic. Shinnecock Indian rapper Flizzy works with music producer Michael Thomas, owner of Blackwatch Studio in Southampton. Michael creates a beat and the 15-year veteran rapper gets behind the microphone and starts putting down verses that run into Thomas' top-of-the-line 180 gigabyte Glyph portable hard drive.

Michael says he has some 400 gigabytes in portable hard drives; indispensable for him and his studio. Modern computers may routinely hold hard drives storing hundreds of gigabytes of data, but Thomas doesn't have a computer he can take everywhere he goes to record and make music.

"Portability is a major factor, and another thing about recording audio is it really eats up a lot of space; if you do one song it can eat up to like 5 gigs with all the parts. I use the portable drive just to record and then I dump it off onto another medium; onto a DVD or the hard drive in a computer."

Much like cheap data storage lets Google Gmail offer users a full gigabyte of storage space in each free email account, individual users and small businesses like Blackwatch Studios are finding large amounts of data storage increasingly affordable and useful.



Lacie hard drive by Porsche

National electronics retail giant Best Buy established their "Geek Squad" to answer questions on "any PC, any brand, any coordinates, any time," and a geek in the Riverhead Best Buy named Billy explained what he looks for in a portable hard drive: size, warranty and speed. Much like processors have been picking up speed on a seeming monthly basis, storage discs have been getting bigger as the CPUs get faster. "I'd say the average portable hard drive today is about 120 to 160 gigabytes."

Maybe the most popular use for cheap, big portable hard drives is to back up desktop or laptop computers. Nervous users can buy a portable hard drive to back up their internal hard drives, and today a first-rate portable hard drive often costs less than a dollar per gigabyte.

Warranty is important because "the thing I'm most concerned with is life-span. If you have an external and you're saving all your information on that as a backup, how often should you back up your backup, is the question."

A lot of computer parts and products are sold as is, meaning if your portable hard drive breaks down, you're out of luck. Billy doesn't trust any particular manufacturer's quality over any other. "As far as dependability goes they're all pretty much the same," he says. "I usually stick with Seagate drives only because they have five year warranties. So when your hard drive goes all your information is still gone, but at least you're getting a new one; the average life for any hard drive is actually only two years."

As far as speed, transmitting data to and from the portable drive, there is not much to worry about. Geek Billy says "generally they're all the same speed now. They're all Firewire or USB 2.0," two of the fastest protocol. "They're much bigger, that's about it. Speed hasn't changed much in a few years. USB 2.0 came out about a year ago but Firewire has been around for longer than that. Transfer speed hasn't really changed, size has just gone way up as the drives physically shrink. In six months there are going be terabyte-hard drives, a thousand gigabytes."

But buyers beware, hard drives all serve the same function, whether portable or inside your computer. In reality, all a portable hard drive is, is a hard drive with a case on it. The knowledgeable buyer can save him or herself money buying a computer hard drive and a case. Billy advises: "You're spending a lot more when you buy the externals already cased, you're spending at least a hundred dollars more than you would on an internal drive, just because you're buying it pre-cased. If you know what you're doing, you're way better off buying a drive and a case."

"I'm about to take you back to where a cat like me, was born and raised Shinnecock R-E-Z." The close of the session at Blackwatch Studio finds Flizzy putting down a final verse that streams into Thomas' portable drive. "They let me take my studio anywhere; portable hard drives are the future, man. Imagine having all the books ever written, music ever recorded, and your grocery list, all on your keychain. Beethoven's 9th, Shakespeare's Hamlet, and 2% milk, all in the palm of your hand."

Shout it From the Treetops

Who hasn't wanted a tree house at some point in their life? For a child, a private hideaway in the trees is the closest thing to freedom. And as adults, we sometimes wish we could just retreat to a secret sanctuary in the sky. Although a tree house comparable to the one belonging to the Swiss Family Robinson probably is not a feasible option, it is easy enough to create a simple tree house that you can enjoy for hours on end.

Once you decide to build a tree house, you should ask your neighbors how they feel about it. Ask for their advice, and even if you don't exactly follow it, take it into consideration. It is only fair for them to be concerned that you will stop building midway through, leaving them with an unsightly mess of boards. To appease their concerns, do your best to make your tree house as invisible as possible. This has the added advantage of making it even more secluded.

It is important to choose the right tree for your tree house; if not, it could become a potential hazard. While you may want to build high up, it is safer to place your tree house about 10 feet from the ground. If wind is a concern, build your tree house in the lower third of the tree and keep size to a minimum. In terms of branch thickness, the points where you fix supports will need to be strong enough to hold the weight of the part of the house they are supporting. The type of tree is important too. Oak, maple, hemlock, fir and beech trees are all good choices for tree houses. A one-story tree house with no overhanging parts should have at least four attachment points (one at each corner) with a minimum thickness of about eight inches.

You will then need to decide what to build your tree house out of. The most affordable option is deadwood – branches and logs. If you choose to use deadwood, make sure it is not rotten or filled with bugs. Another affordable option is scrap wood. A good way to find scrap wood is to visit houses that are undergoing renovations. These houses often have extra roofing, wood, and even doors around, and contractors are usually looking for ways to get rid of them. Lumberyards are also a good source of scrap wood.

Your tree house can be as complicated or as simple as you would like it to be. A simple platform with railing is sufficient, but if you are really adventurous, think about adding roof, walls, even a swinging door. Once you have built your tree house, you will need to find a way to get up to it. The easiest option is a simple ladder with wood planks, but you could also use a rope ladder or a cargo net. Or if you want to get some real exercise on your way up, try using a climbing rope.

GEORGE, THANK YOU.

You changed our lives.

Before we bought the Marquis Spa from you, our lives were completely boring. My husband was never home, he worked 18 hours a day at his law firm.

To keep busy, I jogged, joined volunteer groups, shopped 'til I dropped.

We never saw each other. It was terrible.

Since you installed the spa, our lives have really changed.

The warm water bubbling from those therapeutic heads completely relaxes us.

Look at this picture. We spent a fortune on different backdrops to fit our every mood. This one is a wooded lake. Another one is a deserted tropical beach. And another is...well it's just too personal to talk about.

Now we spend all of our time together, in our new spa.

Its wonderful... except he stopped going to work and lost his job.

If I can get him out of the spa, can you give him a job?

Kiss The Flower

A friend once asked me, "What's your favorite word in the world?" I thought, "What an odd question. My favorite word?" As my mind shuffled through my internal thesaurus, pausing on words like "fabulous" and "rhythm" and moving on to words like "brachiasaurus" and "margarita," she cleared her throat.

"My favorite," she said, "is beja fleur."

"What does that mean?" I asked.

"In Portuguese, it means kiss the flower," she said. "But it's also the Portuguese word for hummingbird."

I thought for a moment. It shed new light on the bird itself to look at it as a "kiss the flower."

Hummingbirds are migrating birds that live as far north as southern Canada in the summer and head down to Central America during the colder months. A few species of hummingbirds stay north in the winter by going on a vegetarian diet (did you know they are usually carnivorous?). They are solitary creatures, traveling alone. They often return to the exact place where they nested in previous years, following precisely the same migration pattern year after year. When it comes time for hummingbirds to make their migration, they spread out their flights over the course of a few weeks so that a natural disaster will not wipe out the whole species.

To attract these beautiful birds to your home, set up a hummingbird garden in your backyard. They will return year after year as a sign of springtime, and you can spend your sunny Sundays watching them as they "kiss the flower."

Hummingbird feeders are filled with sugar-water, which acts as their fuel, giving them the energy to catch insects, from which hummingbirds derive their real nutrition. Some hummingbird feeders have perches and others don't. The reason for this is because people love to watch the astounding flapping of a hummingbird's wings, and feeders often don't have perches. However, this forces the birds to expend a lot of calories, as hovering is much more energy-consuming than flight. When hummingbirds feed from natural flowers, they only spend a short amount of time at each blossom before flying to another. But staying at one feeder is much more difficult. If you get a hummingbird feeder with a perch, the birds will silently thank you.

When hanging your feeder, be careful of windows that don't have curtains on them. The last thing you want is a hummingbird attempting to fly into your kitchen, only to be thrown back onto the grass! That would be a sad sight. If you want to quickly attract hummingbirds, hang your feeder over or in a garden of flowers that attract hum-

Flit, Fleet, and Flutter

So many people have an inherent hatred of insects. Even among animal lovers, there are those who will squash a spider without a second thought. But one insect who is exempt from all these prejudices, without fail, is the butterfly. Even its fraternal twin the moth gets shunned from the circle of praise that surrounds the butterfly. But I am yet to meet someone who has hatred for those brightly colored insects, darting spastically from blossom to blossom, annually making their long and relentless annual flight to warmer pastures in a zigzag trail.

However, butterflies are also one of the few species that we embrace in their adulthood and are repelled by in their youth. With some frequency, I find people disgusted by caterpillars. They are completely harmless, with their fuzzy little bodies and their promise of someday's beauty. And yet, many find them repulsive. Once they make it through those awkward teenage years, though, there'll be smooth sailing through adulthood, adored by all who see them.

Some areas just seem to bustle with butterfly action. I always wondered how my neighbors could beckon these lovely insects to their windows, and my yard remained silent, save some creepy crawling spiders and a yelping dog. Then I learned the trick. It is so simple. Unlike hummingbirds, who require some upkeep and consistency if they are going to rest their bones on your property, butterflies are low-maintenance guests. You just have to lure them in with one simple thing: the butterfly bush.

Buddleia, or butterfly bush, is a veritable magnet for butterflies. This plant is also known as the summer lilac, and it is a large shrub whose branches are weighted down with pungent violet lilacs. These flowers also come in pink and white shades. Not surprising to anyone who's ever had the luxury of breathing in the proximity of lilacs, butterflies are enticed by the fragrance. Sweetest in the mid-day sun, these honey-scented flowers will provide your backyard with the sporadic flapping of butterfly wings all summer.

Buddleia was named after an 18th century botanist named Reverend Adam Buddle. He was English and lived at a time when explorers were bringing all sorts of new and exotic plants back to England. The first came from Chile in 1774. The majority of strains of this plant, however, came from China. The strain of butterfly bush that we are most familiar with today is Buddleia davidii, which was named after a missionary named Pere Armand David. It arrived in Kew Gardens, in London, in 1896.

The butterfly bush, as beautiful as it is, is actually nearly a weed. It is not indigenous to this part of the world, and is thus seen as a non-native colonizer. It is so strong that it has been found growing out of the cracks of pavement or on development sites. What is more poetic than a fountain of butterflies bursting from forgotten ground?

Buddleia is easy to grow and hard to kill. When planting, be aware of the distance between the bush and other plants. At least six feet should be allowed so that the bush doesn't strangle others. After a heavy rainfall, the lovely lilacs will grow heavy with water, causing the branches to droop, thus creating a canopy over any undergrowth. Weed religiously, because seedlings scatter and grow fast, often killing the "host" plant.

A good way to keep your butterfly bush happy in the colder months is to mulch in the fall, which protects the roots from freezing. But for now, it's summer – smooth sailing through the butterfly season.

Yesterday, I went out and invested in a Buddleia. I say "invested" because it is a little bit pricier than some plants. But not only is this plant a perennial, so it will come back every year, but it also provides a fabulous package to your backyard. The lovely sight of pale dew-covered blossoms, the pungent scent of honey, and the welcome company of flitting butterflies are all included.

Simplify Your Kitchen With the Right Utensils

In life, some say that the "winner dies with the most toys," and others say, "he who dies with the most toys still dies." Meanwhile, he or she who has the most toys in the kitchen is more likely to make a better meal while having a better time cooking that meal and, of course, looking better himself or herself. Depending on how meticulous one chooses to get in the process of food preparation, the number of toys, utensils, cookware etc, can add some panache, excitement and expertise to life in your kitchen.

The more items you add to your arsenal of cooking weapons, particularly ones that are unique, the more skilled you can be (or at least appear). Think of how cool Christian Bale is when he clips on his Batman utility belt (equipped with grappling hooks, infrared goggles etc), or how chic Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie appear when fiddling with the multiple tech-gear wrapped around their waists. With the right selection, you can be the superhero of your kitchen, the executioner of a fantastic meal.

You have your various sizes, shapes, and types of knives, forks, spoons, cutting boards, etc, each with its own advantage or disadvantage over the next. But then there are the more rare and intriguing items, like a cherry pitter. It looks a little like a nutcracker, only less intimidating, as it effectively punches the pits out of cherries (or olives, etc) without damaging the fruit, leaving it intact. The 5.5" long dishwasher safe item (available for only $12.50 at www.williams-sonoma.com) cleans up and expedites the traditionally messy process of eating cherries.

Another item that makes preparing particular foods easier and cooler is the garlic twist one can use to mince such vegetables. The two-part polycarbonate drum is about the size of a yo-yo, into which you place the peeled garlic clove and turn the wheels like a pepper shaker for some finely cut garlic. This item is perfect for seasoning pastas, breads, soups and other meals that are enhanced by the powerful aroma, taste, and sensuality of a fine clove of garlic. Diced and/or cubed onions, avocadoes, and other vegetables can be placed in the garlic twist as well. Dishwasher safe, the $15 item (also available at Williams-Sonoma) is a cool bargain.

Although any time is a good time for foods such as burritos, wraps, and tortillas, the summertime is the best when seeking the vegetables and foods to place within the wraps themselves. You can make your own wraps just as you choose your own vegetables, thanks to Williams-Sonoma's new manual tortilla press. Made from pure aluminum, the perfectly circular press looks like a discus that will one day be thrown by Olympians of the future. It makes perfectly even and flat discs of specially ground cornmeal dough which are sure to be fresh and ready for some tasty tortilla treats. Only $19 in price, this is another sleek and chic item from Williams-Sonoma.

For another local outlet for your utensil purchases, take a trip to Loaves and Fishes Cookshop in Bridgehampton. This venue has all kinds of cooking and baking appliances, cutlery, gadgets and more. Get a stainless-steel food mill, chinois strainer, and a grater, all adding shine to your kitchen and convenience to your cooking. Meanwhile, Loaves and Fishes also offers a variety of Chiargui Peppermill sets. Eight-piece and five-piece sets are available, with mills of equal or sequential sizes. Similar to the knives and utensils that seem like cool cooking weapons, these peppermill sets appear like a group of potent cooking potions. Tall and green, short and blue, steel or wood, the peppermills range from $83 to $182.

Although cooking knives are more commonly used utensils (unlike the exotic meat tenderizer or cherry pitter), having a variety available represents style and specialty. Cleavers, boning knives, scaling knives, salmon slicers, paring knives, cheese shavers, and sharp steak knives may be a part of the same family, but each has its individual role and talent. One knife carves giant slabs of juicy meat, while the other gently shaves slices of garlic or vegetables on top. While the scaler scrapes off the rough, jagged exterior of the fish, the paring knife gently removes the hard rind of a lemon. Meanwhile, the cook with knives in hand looks almost like a human Swiss army knife – a useful kitchen utensil all in itself.

A whole array of summer cookware is now available at numerous locations. Take the time to browse this summer's utensils and decide what works best and looks best. With the right selection, he or she who cooks with the most toys still cooks, only they look a lot cooler.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Herbaceous Perennial – Spiderwort

One of the great garden plants for East End beds and borders – one that adds color and interest in the late spring/early summer garden – is Spiderwort. The name is somewhat unflattering, and though it accurately describes the leggy leaves, it is a disservice to this wonderful, delicately blooming perennial.

Spiderwort has all the characteristics of a great, permanent perennial flower, and is to be considered as a punctuation plant for garden beds. It grows well in partly shady areas, and can even be used under shrubs where many other perennials refuse to bloom. Unlike many perennials that require some diligence, the flowers of the Spiderwort never need deadheading – with the plant continuing to produce new flowers each morning. If cut back to the ground in mid-summer after the plant stops blooming, it will re-sprout and bloom again in fall. With some winter protection, the plant will provide many years of enjoyment.

The technical name (genus) for Spiderwort is Tradescantia. It is part of the family of plants known as Commelinaceae. Within this genus are a number of complex hybrids that have evolved over time. All of the plants share similar characteristics, regardless of cultivar, and differ primarily in flower color. The various cultivars originated from cross-pollinating three wild varieties: T. virginiana, T. ohiensis, T. subaspera, which are native to eastern North America and grow in moist, open or partially shaded locations. About 49 identified cultivars originate from these three original varieties. Flowers come in shades of white, whitish-blue, blue, red, lilac, or pink.

Spiderworts form erect clumps with fleshy stems and grass-like, alternating leaves. Clumps provide unusual interest points with bright green, pointed and fleshy leaves. The stems, when broken, exude a sticky, mucilaginous sap. Most of the plants grow to about 18 inches tall and have arching leaves that spread a little less wide than the height. The flowers are typically three-petaled and an inch or so in diameter, though some of the hybrids have flowers as large as three inches in diameter. Spiderworts are borne in terminal umbels (or clusters), in which all the flower stems originate from the same point.

Flowers open in the morning and close by midday (they stay open a little longer when in shaded locations). Usually one flower opens per cluster at any given time, with the total blooming period lasting for about six to eight weeks. A single plant may have multiple clusters of flowers so there may be several flowers open at any given time.

Some of the cultivars to keep an eye out for include the following varieties: "Isis," with velvety, dark blue flowers; "Karminglut," with intense red flowers; "Pauline," with pink-lilac flowers; "Blue Stone," with clear blue flowers; "Innocence," a larger variety to two feet with creamy white flowers; "Snowcap," with large, pure white flowers about two inches across; "Osprey," with white flowers and large feathery blue stamens; and "Red Cloud," with beautiful, rosy-red flowers. The white-flowered varieties are considered to be the most rare, as the natural color is blue.

Spiderworts can often be seen growing in the wild, though we do not recommend collecting these. The wild plants occur in moist locations along sunny streams, or at the edges of wooded areas. Most have blue flowers. They can be picked out by their clumping style and alternate leaves that make them distinct from other plants. In the garden, this leaf distinction is one of the reasons to use the plant to punctuate the landscape.

Spiderworts prefer to be located in situations where they have moist, fertile soil. While they do well in full sun, this type of location requires frequent watering so the soil does not dry out completely. When planting, be sure to use plenty of peat or compost at the bottom of the hole before situating the plant. Fertilize in spring and late summer to promote blooming.

It is said the Cherokee Indians used Spiderwort as an ingredient in a number of medicines for kidney and digestive problems. They also supposedly used a root poultice as a remedy for cancer. While we have not tried any such remedies, we have discovered that spreading the sap from crushed leaves on insect bites helps relieve the itching.

Spiderwort is one of those garden plants that we believe "must" be in the garden. Its unusual clumping form and leaves, as well as its moist, succulent flowers suggest this is a great consideration for the perennial border or shady nook. We highly recommend it!

Landscape Lighting...More than Just a Few Bright Lights

Traditionally, landscape lighting was no more than a light at the end of a driveway and maybe a few solar powered lights framing a walkway. It served its purpose while holding potential for something far greater.

Today outdoor lighting is the hottest trend in landscape design; it looks great and is tremendously functional. "Night-lighting your landscape offers a creative way to showcase your home and property after dark," said Joe Densieski, president of Nu Green Illuminations Inc. "However, there are many more benefits to landscape lighting than beauty."

Outdoor lighting will brighten the landscape as well as highlight a home's best features. It is a proven deterrent to crime, increases safety, allows the homeowner to enjoy their landscaping investment, and increases the value of a home.

Landscape lighting will aid you in protecting your personal property, family and friends through its beauty. Landscape lighting attracts the attention of people passing a home; making the home more visible and high visibility reduces crime.

Path and spread lighting provides safety to landscape paths and entrances, while motion sensor lights deter potential burglars and alert the homeowner that there is movement on their property.

Far too many homeowners find it difficult to relax and enjoy their property during the day. The hectic work and recreation schedules that most Americans keep does not leave many daylight hours available for relaxation at home. Landscape lighting is the solution to the busy schedules of today's homeowners, increasing usability of decks, sitting areas and recreational spaces.

Outdoor lighting allows you to enjoy your outdoor living space long after sunset and creates an elegant atmosphere for entertaining by transforming darkened grounds into a welcomed fantasy of light. Spotlighting allows homeowners to illuminate individual objects of beauty while silhouetting provides sleek shadows and drama in a garden.

When selling a home, too often the home's exterior fails to make the same great impression as the interior. Many interesting features are lost in the shadows when dusk falls, feeding the statistic that 95 percent of house shoppers won't even consider a house that lacks curb appeal.

Without proper outdoor lighting, potential buyers will have no idea of the beauty that your home offers. Homeowners can emphasize the positives on their property and hide the negatives through landscape lighting. Cross lighting which uses two or more lights from below to create a dramatic effect can showcase an arbor or rare tree, while taking the focus off of the less desirable characteristic of the landscape.

"Over the past few years there have been many developments in the actual hardware used for landscape design," according to Densieski. "Fixture designs are much more durable and ascetically pleasing. Electrical components are more secure due to multi-tap transformers and compact fluorescent bulbs produce soft lighting with the highest energy savings lasting up to 10,000 hours."

With innovations in hardware and increased popularity, outdoor landscape lighting is more affordable than ever. "Many homeowners are scared of the money and disturbance to their property during installation," said Densieski. "All I ask homeowners for is an opportunity to show them the benefits of landscape lighting, our before and after pictures and the affordability of the products. Which, more often than not, sells them on the worthwhile investment of landscape lighting."

Nu Green landscaping takes this concept a step further by providing potential customers with a free, no obligation demonstration. While the homeowner is at work the 'Nu Green Lighting Elves' stop by their house to set up temporary landscape light. Upon arriving home after work the homeowner is surprised to see their home and landscape beautifully illuminated.

"We have almost a 100 percent success rate with our at home demonstrations," stated Densieski. "As soon as the lights are gone, the homeowner is on the phone asking us to come back and install permanent lights."

Outdoor lighting can bring back lost beauty, create interest and provide safety. It illuminates the best features of your landscape and home, showcasing your palace while providing a relaxing environment for your friends and family.

"My basement renovation was executed by S.P. & C. exactly as it had been planned. Steve's team was punctual, highly professional and had a high degree of attention to detail. The site was always organized and cleaned up at the end of every day. The project was completed on time and on budget, which is perhaps the greatest testimony I can give; apart from mentioning that the completed renovation has greatly increased the value of my home. I would recommend S.P. & C. to anyone for any project."

Supersonic Deer Deterrent

Owners of homes and estates in the Hamptons where deer destruction and health risks are among the highest in the East, have a new option in the ongoing struggle against the plague of destruction caused by white-tailed deer.

Dubbed the DeerTech 880 Deer Deterrent System by Nature Technologies, the device uses high-end speakers to blast ultrasonic sound at up to 110 decibels, deterring deer but causing no harm to wildlife, domestic animals or humans.

Previously available only in Connecticut and Westchester where over 600 units have been installed, the Hamptons was a logical expansion for Nature Technologies. "People tell me that there are two universal subjects for conversation in the Hamptons: the traffic and the deer. We hope to help with one of them," said Andrew Bleiman, Nature Technologies' Vice President of Marketing. "The deer problem out here is legendary, but we've had great success in areas with heavy deer populations even through the winter," he said.

Developed and patented over the last few years, the device was specifically designed for homeowners who were dissatisfied with the current available options of smelly and ineffective sprays and large, unsightly and expensive fences.

Dan Lescyczski, formerly with Lynch's Landscaping in Southampton, is Nature Technologies' Regional Director of the Hamptons/Long Island markets. Nature Technologies is currently working with local landscapers who are trained to install the DeerTech 880 system. Among the landscapers currently signed on are Dave Green Estate Care, MDG Landscaping and Mahoney & Associates.

Standing between three to four feet off the ground, the device resembles a small flying saucer. The domed top containing the speakers is approximately 17 inches in diameter and four inches wide. It is painted black and green to blend with its surroundings. Cycling irregularly through 10 different frequencies, the sound emitted by the device is not audible to humans but is as loud as a jet engine to deer. The very loud volume prevents the deer from hearing approaching danger, making them uneasy and anxious, and unlikely to browse.

The company seeks to combine innovative technology with expertise in deer and deer behavior, and an active, local customer support organization. Michael Farina, property manager at Westchester's renowned Bedford Estate and a well-known local authority on ecology and deer, is a Senior Wildlife Advisor at Nature Technologies. His expertise was critical to the development of the system, successfully deterring deer's destructive behavior as their diet and focus changes through the year.

Of the more than 120 properties currently using the system, customer satisfaction rates are high, even as the area has endured particularly harsh winters, when food is scarce and deer are driven to eat vegetation they would normally ignore.

Wildlife experts consider more than 15 deer per square mile to be destructive to the ecosystem, to the point where herds of white-tails can denude forests and destroy small animal habitats beyond the point of recovery. In much of the Hamptons the deer population is well over 50 deer per square mile and in some places such as Shelter Island it is believed to be over 80. Deer are also known for spreading Lyme Disease and are responsible each year for more than $1 billion in residential property damage.

Other less sophisticated ultrasonic devices have

Mailboxes That Deliver

If you're like me, part of your daily routine is checking your mail. But, where would our mail be without the mailbox to house all the numerous letters, bills, catalogs, promotions, and small packages which we receive?

The Postal Department has regulations concerning mailbox location and construction. There are guidelines for both urban and rural areas, and mailboxes can be removed if they don't comply with postal rulings.

Primarily, a mailbox cannot be placed where it would interfere with the safety of the public or the carrier; nor can it be constructed in such a way where sharp objects such as nails can possibly cause injury.

To accommodate the carrier, mailboxes should be placed on the right hand side of the road in the direction of their route. Mailboxes should be placed 6-8" from the front face of the curb and have a vertical height from 3 to 4 feet from the ground to the bottom of the box.

Mailbox styles can be contemporary or traditional with three basic dimensions. They can also come with or without locks.

Mailboxes can be made from a variety of materials including wood, stucco, rust free aluminum, brick and stone, fiberglass, and various metals such as brass and cast iron. They can be mounted on posts or walls. You can add pizzaz to any plain old mailbox by mounting it on stands made from innovative materials – namely, sheet metal or even old milk bottles.

Mailboxes have a unique shape and style and are very decorative, so they can reflect your hobbies and personality.

The wall style mailbox can be personalized with sign fronts, which come in various colors, may be hand painted, or have a saddlebag design.

Your home mailbox can be a log cabin or light house structure, or it may reflect your favorite leisure time activity, for instance fishing if it's in the shape of a fish.

If you are the type of person who is always on the go and loves to travel, the box configuration can be a plane, train, boat or car.

For music lovers, boxes can have a piano, guitar or trumpet design.

And the most popular of all the forms is, naturally, animals and birds—cows, chickens, dogs, pigs, parrots and dolphins.

Among the trends in mailboxes today are the folk art mailboxes. Two Rhode Island anthropologists, William and Sarah Turnbaugh; have documented many of these folk art rural route mailboxes and have presented their findings at the National Post Office Museum. One of their favorites was two plastic chickens which adorned the mailbox of the late Antonietta Goodwin, a farmer, known as the Chicken Lady. On special holidays she would dress up these chickens in original design outfits to reflect the season's festivities. Thus emerged Chicken Claus, the Chicken Easter Bunnies, and of course, for an extra special treat, Halloween Chicken Giblets.

In 1993 the Smithsonian Institute along with the United States Postal Service opened the National Postal Museum. This museum contains many mailboxes which capture the feel of Americana. Some of the designs featured are a replica of a 1930 McCormick Deering W 30 tractor, a life size Arabian horse in honor of the Pony Express, and a bear holding a box bearing all the wonderful gifts and letters which people receive.

Mailboxes are miniature homes for our individual letters and packages. That is undoubtedly why we want our mailboxes to be so personalized. There is something magical about opening up a mailbox door and seeing what's inside; you never know what you may find, which makes our ordinary trip to the mailbox extraordinary.

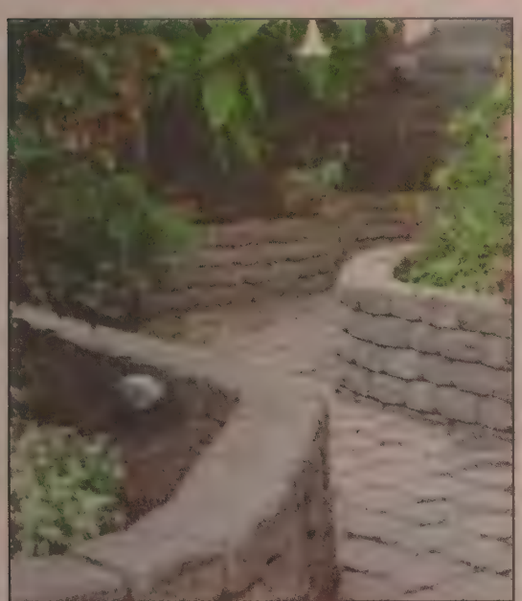
Dan's HOME Guide

Walk This Way

The walk up to your front door can't just be a boring old lot of grass, now can it? No, if you just leave the grass then the grass will die from walking on it too much. This will cause dead grass and an ugly dirt trail. It is for this reason that the invention of the walkway was created for homes. Walkways allow you to get out of your car and walk to your front door without negatively affecting your lawn. Since walkways are so exciting to so many of us, they must be discussed.

Probably the most common walkway is the flagstone walkway. This can be installed by buying paver's flagstone or blocks of flagstone. Paver's flagstone is flagstone that interlocks so that no part of the grass appears on your path to the walkway. This can create a timeless quality to your walkway and also is easy because no real maintenance is required. An occasional sweep here and there might be necessary, but other than that, nothing really needs to be done to this walkway.

Laying out flagstone blocks also makes an excellent walkway. Children like this kind of styling a walkway because it makes for walking on the flagstone kind of a game as you hop from one to the next. Installing this kind of walkway is difficult if you are going to do it by yourself. This writer can vouch for this, having installed one of these walkways. A common misconception about installing this kind of walkway is that you should dig individual holes for each block. However, it is incredibly difficult to dig holes of exact size for each block. The best way to install a flagstone walkway is to dig out the path of the walkway entirely, lay down your blocks, then fill back in the area surrounding the blocks with dirt. When this is done, immediately plant grass seeds around the area so that grass will grow around the blocks.



Laying out a walkway block by block can obviously be done with stone other than flagstone. You can use just about any kind of stone, as long as each block of the stone is large enough to fit your foot and as long as it is cut flat so that it can be easily installed into the ground. An interesting stone that I found online is igneous rock. This is a stone made from lava from a volcano that has cooled down. It is shiny, and black in color, giving the walkway a unique and beautiful appeal. It is important to remember that when laying out a walkway stone by stone, that you place each stone into the ground so that it is level with the ground. If you place the stone too deep into the ground, you can easily trip on the land surrounding it. If you place the stone too high above ground, you can easily trip on the stone.

Another form of walkway is loose stone or loose dirt. This kind of walkway is difficult to maintain, but it can sometimes be a great option for a walkway. If you opt to do this kind of walkway, expect to have to fill it with loose stone (like gravel) or loose dirt at least once a year. This is because the filler will get kicked around every time you walk on the walkway.

Finally, you have the brick walkway. A brick walkway is classic. It should be installed into the ground so that it is level with the ground surrounding it. Bricks are fun, because as with driveways, they can be placed in a pattern anyway that you choose. This means that laying out bricks for your walkway is an art form.

No matter what type of walkway you choose to have for your home, it is always important to keep in mind that maintenance of your walkway is going to be necessary. However, maintaining a walkway is much easier than trying to maintain a grass path.

Home Libraries for Poseurs and Professors

Moving into or redecorating a home can be many things. It's daunting, intimidating, refreshing, fun, and always time and money consuming. If you're a reader or a traditionalist, a home library is a must. There needs to be a place to keep your books that makes them accessible and easy to peruse. If you're not of the literati but have extra space and fancy friends, a few walls of weighty tomes can create instant intellectual credibility and maybe even impress a few guests. The following hints will help you in whichever of the above two categories you fall.

In a lot of ways, your book collection is like a hunter's trophy room. Assuming we've actually read some of the volumes on the shelf, there's not much reason to keep them. Unless you're a bibliophile writer who obsessively refers back to your prey on display for nifty quotes to impress your readers – or at least your editor – with your deeply versatile range of knowledge, the pages are read and never will be again. However, most of us keep them anyway. It stands to reason that this is either some deep desire to grasp at the past like an old jock reliving high school glory days through a senior yearbook, or it's a desperate attempt to show all who enter your inner sanctum how damn smart you are. Many of us probably fall somewhere in the middle.

There are a couple of different approaches for your library. The first is more about visual pleasure than content. If you're going for that old-fashioned study look with dark wooden shelves and perhaps an animal head, pipe collection, African spear, or a suit of armor you picked up during your many adventurous travels, the key is finding hardcover books bound in leather or like materials. They would need to be the kind without dust jackets and maybe some of those nice gold printed titles on the spine. Stay away from Encyclopedia Britannica collections. They take up a lot of space, and say nothing except that you fell for those commercials with that dopey bespectacled kid. Books with this type of binding are not always expensive, even if they're actually antique. Better than that, what you might find on Ebay or the LVIS in East Hampton will be things like dated essay collections or philosophy and religious books with subject matter so dense that no one will question them for fear of revealing their own ignorance. Visitors may wonder whether or not you've actually read them, but no one will dare open their mouth. From an aesthetic standpoint, the look will be achieved, and at the same time, you won't have to discuss the Divine Comedy, Paradise Lost, Chesterton, that early copy of Finnegan's Wake, or worse – Magical Realism, whatever that is. You win.

For true readers with a desire for that same look, you can find copies of most classics in nicely bound versions offered by a variety of publishers. The old Modern Library series was great over the years and can still be found for reasonable prices. Grolier's The World's Great Classics is another solid collection. Go to any local bookstore (Black Cat and Canio's in Sag Harbor are good ones) and certainly any Barnes and Noble, usually the discount rack, and look around. Things like the Complete Works of William Shakespeare are almost exclusively printed with gold edges and antique inspired covers. If someone asks, just tell him Billy was meant for the stage, not the nightstand.

The most genuine library is one that mixes the wonderful stew of whatever it is you truly love. With this type of collection, you should have read or have a working knowledge of at least fifty percent of what's on the shelves – all readers understand the need to buy far beyond what we can actually finish. Don't be afraid to have Tom Clancy rubbing elbows with Bill Burroughs or Blake. Some genres actually fit nicely together and can allow for uniformity. For example, if Burroughs happens to be your thing, you'll notice that Penguin puts out his and other Beat's books with a consistent orange spine. Keep Kerouac and the lot together and you'll have continuity for that shelf. On the next shelf you might place your New Directions paperback copies of Rimbaud or Baudelaire, which can then segue into Grove Press' Beckett and on to Scribner's Hemingway and Fitzgerald, then Vintage Contemporaries' books by the likes of Jay McInerney and Brett Easton Ellis. There are ways of keeping things looking good while following a cohesive line of thought.

Whatever your pleasure, every home should contain some books. Read what you like or don't read at all. Just keep it pretty and never, ever, out your pretense and posturing with the wrong books. Be careful, someone might know more than you think.

However, you don't have to leave the tree house the same way you came in. A zip line is a great way to make a quick escape, and so is a slide.

Once you have finished the outside, the fun begins. Your tree house can be like a fort or it can be more like a little cottage in the air. If you choose to go the way of the fort, there are many simple contraptions that you will find useful. Create a pulley system and attach a bucket at the end. This way you can send up such things as water balloons and receive snacks from Mom without actually letting her into the tree house. To protect your tree house from any enemies, be sure to get some water balloon launchers and institute a secret password. Communicating between neighboring tree houses is key, and nothing works better than the classic tin-can phone. No matter what the newest technology is, this invention is still the best. If you want your tree house to be more like a cottage, consider adding some of the modern conveniences of home, such as a portable radio and even a television. Curtains and beanbag chairs can help to create a homey environment. Other good things to keep handy in your tree house, whether fort or cottage, are flashlights, books, bug spray, walkie-talkies, sleeping bags, and even a stash of snacks.

Alas, if a tree house is not an option for you, pick up a copy of The Swiss Family Robinson by Johann Wyss and let your imagination run wild.

been on the market for years but most ultrasonic products are not properly designed, deployed or powered, making them ineffective. Other methods to fight deer – including electric fencing, culling, and birth control darts – are expensive, dangerous and highly controversial.

"We are pleased to announce that we have recently completed research with Oxford and Berlin Universities that prove, definitively, that our system is completely safe to wildlife, songbirds, domestic animals, and to humans," said Trevor Price, Nature Technologies president and CEO. "We have also heavily invested in an ongoing research test bed at Princeton University that is and will be conducting exciting studies on deer behavior, ultrasonic and deterrent optimization, habituation, sensory impacts, travel, and non-verbal communications."

NTI backs its system completely and guarantees its effectiveness when used for at least 90 days. Because of the unique nature of each property and herd characteristics, the company provides free onsite deer damage assessments to determine the best strategy.

Nature Technologies, based in Pleasantville, NY, draws on a team of experts in ecology, landscaping, technology, wildlife and deer behavior to develop, create and continue to evolve the most effective, long-term solutions of deer control available to the public. Kiss (continued from page 12)

So, now that you have your feeder, how to do you plant your garden? First of all, it is a bad idea to use pesticides on the flowers you are going to plant in your hummingbird garden. Even if it will make the flowers multiply, it will make them poisonous and possibly deadly for birds. Hummingbirds have a very weak sense of smell, so fragrant flowers are more for you than for them. They are more attracted to bright, visibly powerful flowers with high nectar content.

A good hummingbird garden will consist of a variety of plants, attracting different kinds of insects and providing the hummingbird with a diverse menu. The "trumpet creeper" vine is a plant that produces hundreds of trumpet-like red-orange flowers that hummingbirds simply can't resist. Also, in the winter, the trumpet creeper offers shelter to other songbirds who don't migrate. The trumpet creeper should be planted at the base of a tree or a fence, where it can have support, as the vine may grow up to 65 feet!

The "red columbine," which is the state flower of Colorado, is a magnet for hummingbirds as well. Since it blooms in March, when the first hummingbirds are returning from the winter migrations, it is an integral part of a hummingbird garden. The first migrants will stop at your garden before someone else's only if your blossoms are already in bloom, and if the hummingbirds continue to find nutrients there, then there they will stay.

"Beebalm," or "Oswego Tea," is another red flower that beckons to hummingbirds. It's a perennial flower that blooms in late spring, and it also attracts butterflies and bees. The bonus of this flower is that its leaves make a pungent tea, ready for human consumption.

There are many more flowers that attract hummingbirds, including azaleas, manzanita, cape honeysuckle, and foxglove. And the best thing about setting up your hummingbird garden is that your birds have an internal map that will bring them back to the same place every spring. Once you entice them to your garden, you'll be able to watch these little beja fleurs kiss your flowers every year.

Dan's HOME Guide

Cool New Toys to Soothe the Savage Back

There doesn't seem to be one night that goes by when my wife doesn't ask me to massage her back or her feet. She claims it helps her to fall asleep. Once in a while I give her what she calls a "brain rub," which is nothing more than applying the tips of my fingers to her scalp and rubbing them back and forth in a gentle motion. She calls it a "brain rub" because she claims it stimulates her brain. The fact that she's usually fast asleep in minutes has led me to challenge that claim.

There is no doubt that all of us enjoy a good massage every so often. But there are times when it is inopportune to get to a spa or a massage therapist. And your spouse or friend may not be around when you need a good rubdown. In such cases, you can turn to some wonderful new massage devices that are currently on the market, all of which promise to help ease your pain for a nominal cost. There are quite a few devices out there, so I have concentrated on several of the more innovative products.

For those who need to work out knots in their back and neck, the Thera Cane Back Massage Tool (www.theracane.com) makes it easy to apply pain-relieving deep compression directly to hard, knotted "trigger points" anywhere they occur—breaking up tension even in the hardest-to-reach muscles between your shoulder blades. The cane is made of plastic that has several protuberances that culminate in a ball tip. Its ingenious configuration allows you to apply deep pressure massage to the back, neck, shoulders, legs, hips, arms, buttocks, anywhere and everywhere, without help from anyone.

Many people complain about sore feet, and doctors have known for years that the alternate application of heat and cold coupled with massage to sore and inflamed tissue relieves pain, reduces swelling, and promotes healing. The problem has always been how to massage with heat and follow immediately with cold massage.

Well, "That Foot Thing" (www.ThatFootThing.com), which is a massage "bottle" divided into two sections for both cold and warm applications, is the first such therapy device. It allows anyone to apply these healing principles to easily treat common foot ailments, such as heel pain, plantar fasciitis, or heel spurs, at home or at the office or wherever there is fifteen square inches of space as well as warm and ice cold water. From the comfort of your chair you are only three minutes away from pain relief.

Head massage has been practiced for thousands of years to relieve stress and improve the condition of the scalp and hair. Extremely effective and non-invasive, the Tingler (www.tinglers.com) is an inexpensive, "anywhere/anytime" way to benefit from this age-old method of scalp massage. The 10-inch, round-tipped copper prongs of this handheld scalp massager tingle millions of nerve endings, releasing brain-stimulating endorphins, relieving stress and headaches, and helping to improve the condition of your hair. I think I may buy this for my wife and give my own tired fingers a break!

After you have finished massaging yourself, you may want to consider giving your baby and your pet a nice little massage too. The Snukkles Baby Massager (www.nukkles.com) uses the same reflex technology as the popular Nukkles Body Massager, providing mothers with a gentle and proficient handheld massager for calming and relaxing a restless baby. The item is made of plastic (available in yellow, pink, and blue) and is roughly about the size of your hand and shaped in a square. At each corner is a raised nub that is contoured to the individual's body. It glides effortlessly over clothing or can be applied directly to the skin using massage oil.

The Nuzzles Pet Massager (www.nuzzles.com) is the pet version of the Nukkles Body Massager and is perfect for use on cats, dogs, horses, etc. Both hand-held massagers have proven to be great massage tools, and are a lot of fun to boot. Pet massage has been shown to improve health, enhance pet-owner bonding, and provide pure enjoyment for your pet.

I will admit that there's nothing like getting a full body massage from a competent massage therapist. But during those times when it's impractical to leave the house, you may want to consider various self-massage options, of which there are many more than listed here. Self-massage may not give you the same enjoyment you'll receive from a masseuse's hands, but it will sure come close, and your body will thank you for it.

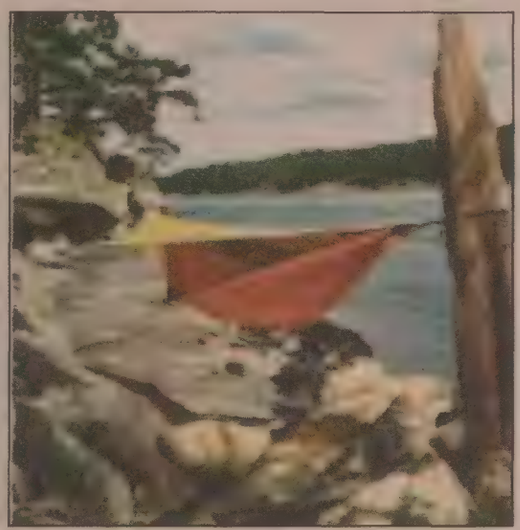
Travel Light with a Hammock Tent

Are you planning a camping or backpacking trip this summer but dreading taking along that heavy, cumbersome tent? Oh, and don't forget to include the bulky sleeping pad, poles, and some ground cover. And once you get to your favorite spot you're going to have to find some flat terrain upon which to assemble your tent. For many people, myself included, this is an unwelcome chore. However, there is an alternative: a hammock tent.

I started using a hammock back in the late 1980s when there was only the Army surplus jungle hammock and the various mesh survival hammocks which you could rig up to suit your needs with ponchos/tarps, bug nets, etc. I loved using a hammock, but it wasn't always the sleeping system of choice.

A few years ago I went backpacking with some friends and wanted a lighter shelter than a tent. While doing some research on the Internet, I came across the Hennessy Hammock, which appealed to me because of its lightweight design.



Hennessy Hammocks use high quality, low-stretch polyester and spectra ropes with parallel fiber cores. The ultra-light hammocks are made of 70D high-tenacity fabric. This fabric is extra soft and comfortable for sleeping without a sleeping bag. It is also more resistant to mosquito sting-throughs than the 200D nylon fabric used by several other brands. The tree-hugger straps protect trees from rope burns and, unlike a tent, do not leave footprints on the ground and no leveling or trenching is needed.

Hennessy's UltraLite Backpacker ($170; www.hennessyhammock.com) weighs only 1 pound, 15 ounces. That's about the same as a very light bivy bag, but because you don't need to carry around a tent and all its accoutrements, the weight savings are considerably greater. Plus it has its own bug netting to give you a sleep as undisturbed as in any tent.

For me, comfort is the number one reason I switched to using a hammock tent and I can't emphasize this enough. A hammock is far more comfortable than any pad out there, including the self-inflating pads. Besides supporting your back, relaxing your body, and reducing foot swelling, there is the gentle rocking that can lull you to sleep, as well as the lack of mystery bumps like rocks and roots that you think are not there until you lie down to sleep on the ground. And you don't wind up sliding to one end of your hammock, which sometimes happens in your tent when you can't find the perfect level spot.

A properly hung hammock will allow you to sleep on your side or back without a curve. Most hammocks I have tried allow you to sleep at an angle to centerline. Sleeping about 10 to 20 degrees off the center allows you to lie flat. This is the technique used by the South and Central Americans who invented the hammock.

But even if you can sleep on your side, after a while you may decide not to. After a few days on the trail in a hammock, that natural slight curve becomes your friend. The tired knotted back muscles relax extremely well sleeping in that curve, and after getting used to it, you will prefer it. Often I find the transition into the hammock after a long break from the field is fairly easy, but getting used to a flat bed after a few weeks in a hammock is actually harder. Another point about sleeping like this – when you can elevate your feet above your body, it helps to reduce the swelling that sometimes happens overnight after a good hard day of hiking.

One disadvantage of hammock tents is that they are a little colder than tents because they compress the insulation around the sleeping bag. This is not an issue in the summer for most places, but in colder temperatures you should pack along a Space Blanket or other heat-reflective item.

At the end of the day, then, backpacking or camping with a hammock tent comes down to personal preference. By all means try one. Sometimes we all get the tendency to think in one-dimensional terms, such as harboring the belief that we "must" use a tent. But there are alternatives and a hammock is a good one. And if you're looking for flexibility, my hammock tent serves as its own vestibule, chair, lounge, gear loft, solo tent, and of course – a hammock. A tent is always a tent.

Fantastic Front Doors

Because the front door is the first detailed area of your home that guests will see, it is very important to decorate it properly, therefore establishing an overall tone for the house. The design of this area is clearly dependent upon the type of home you own, but it should also reflect your personality (if only a little bit). Three great ways to stylize the exterior of your front entranceway are doormats, brass bells, and knockers.

Nothing is as impersonal as an electric doorbell. Surely they have their place, and in an extremely large home, it is fairly practical to have a doorbell that resonates throughout the entire house. But if your home isn't Villa Maria, then maybe it's time to remove that dismal ding-dong and look for something a little more classy.

Doorknockers are a great alternative to the old buzzer. They can add style and personality to a home. A brass lobster, crab, whale's tale, or sea shell knocker works extremely well with beach homes, especially if the seascape theme is carried throughout the inside of the house as well. If you live on the North Fork, or by one of the South Fork vineyards, maybe a bunch of brass grapes, or grapes and grape leaves, are in order. The options are really endless. If your home is in Montauk, a lighthouse may be a great way to play on the historical significance of the village. Other, more nautical, knockers may work better for a sailor or fisherman. The old classic is the anchor, but sailboats and ship wheels are also popular.

If your front door is made almost entirely out of glass, then a knocker may not be the right fit for you. Don't fret, there are other options that add character to your house. Wall-mounted bells are a great alternative to knockers and electric buzzers. Since bells come in a variety of shapes, sizes, sounds, and metals, finding the right bell may take a little time, but it is worth it. If you visit most nautical shops, you should be able to find the basic brass bell, but if you are looking for something with a little more history, search for antique ship bells, railroad bells, farm dinner bells (post bells), or if the house can stylistically support a cupola bell or church bell, why not do something a little different? Not only do they work at getting the homeowner's attention, but they are fantastic conversation pieces.

Turnkey or twist doorbells are another option, but if you are determined to keep your electric doorbell, you still have alternatives to the ding dong. Installing a refit Victorian servant's bell is a nice way to add a touch of class to your home and circumvent the ordinary with a beautiful and simple ring.

Doormats and grates are a second way to personalize your house and greet your guests. The old "Welcome" mat isn't exactly what it used to be. Designed to clean the dirt off your shoes before entering the house, utility is only half their job. Humorous and kitsch, artificial grass doormats are one thing you should probably steer clear of. They are inexpensive, but that's exactly my point. They make your home look inexpensive as well. Instead, look for something in straw, woven rope, teak, or bamboo. Metal is also an option. Brass, cast iron, shabby chic painted metal, and oxidized copper are all great options. For more regal mats, a monogram might be a nice idea, or an oversized mat that commands attention. Other than a monogram, stay away from mats with words written on them. There are two distinct reasons for this. First, as funny as it may be to have a mat that reads, "Go Away" the novelty will eventually wear off. The second reason is because the words will also eventually wear off, leaving the mat to look old and tired. It is inevitable that your mats will wear down, so replace them when they do. It's okay to have a house that looks like it is being lived in, but it shouldn't look like you can't manage the upkeep.

There are many other ways to make your home's entrance more appealing and welcoming. But these few ideas should set you in the right direction. Your house is a reflection of you; a dull home usually equates to a dull homeowner, so take some time and decorate wisely.

Save the Crystal for Another Day

Remember the days when disposable plates were so flimsy that the food used to soak through, staining your clothes, or they would simply break, the food falling onto the ground? And when it came to plastics, the original plates were so brittle that they would easily chip and crack.

Disposables and plastics have certainly evolved with the technological age. Most are strong enough to hold your food without leaking or spilling and are microwavable.

Designs for plastic plates have solved the juggling problem of attempting to balance your plate and glass on your lap, especially if you are having lunch at the beach. Plastic plates are both practical and convenient, with some designs featuring a built in cup holder along with the food compartments. This section of your plate can also double as a handy spot for salsa and dip.

Plastics come in a wide variety of materials, ranging from the most expensive polycarbonate plastic tableware to cheaper plastics such as melamine.

Polycarbonate tableware is so durable because the same material is used to make bulletproof glass. Some grades, such as Window, are UV stabilized. It can also withstand extreme temperatures ranging from 41-280 degrees. Polycarbonate is safe for both the dishwasher and microwave.

A good source for drinkware is The Tango company, which is part of Viscount SA (www.viscount.com). Tango uses Lexan Polycarbonate for drinkware. Along with being both microwavable and dishwasher friendly, this particular type of polycarbonate provides excellent insulation for both hot and cold drinks and is impenetrable to odors. Since Tango drinkware is so sturdy, it can withstand the rigors of daily use and therefore services hospitals, commercial airlines, beach resorts and family restaurants as well as many other personal and public needs.

A common question that arises at the beach or while sitting poolside is how to keep your favorite beverage from getting as hot as the outside temperature. The solution is the polycarbonate Polar Pitcher (available through Kid Smart Living – www.kidsmartliving.com). It has a unique design. The inside of the pitcher has a rust free aluminum tube which is attached to the bottom. This aluminum tube (which you fill with ice) effectively allows for transference of cold between the ice and liquid contained in the pitcher, preventing it from getting warm. This pitcher also has a lid and a topple-free base to ensure that you won't lose a drop of your ice cold drink.

Melamine is a popular plastic for tableware since it is scratch-resistant, non-toxic, can't break, is great for any indoor or outdoor gathering, and is easily cleaned in the dishwasher. It tends to be cheaper than some other plastics because it has a tendency to warp and is not microwavable.

These plates are guaranteed to make a real splash at your next party. They are coral reef fish-shaped plates with matching acrylic goblets. The plates come in two sizes proportioned just right for the appetites of both the big fish and small fry in your life. (Goblets should be hand washed to prevent color fading.) They are available at Kid Smart Living.

The Make-a-Photo Plate kit by Makeit will create a melamine plastic plate featuring your smiling face as the design. This novel idea is a great conversation piece and a memorable keepsake, also available at Kid Smart Living.

Another popular plastic for tableware is polypropylene. This plastic is boil proof, heat resistant, long lasting and less expensive than polycarbonate. It can be placed in the dishwasher but not all types of polypropylene are microwavable. Sea glass is an exception.

Without a doubt, SAN Plastic (styrene acrylonitrile) covers all the bases. It won't break, shatter, and can be placed in both the dishwasher and microwave. Two popular brands featuring SAN Plastic are Infinity and Bentley. (Bentley offers a line of ColorWare which comes in twelve 'SANtastic' colors.)

This summer you can really enjoy your R and R by using the new and improved plastic table and drinkware. This makes dining in or out of doors hassle-free, taking the worry out of the additional cost of replacing disposables, broken glass, soggy plates, plates that crack, color fading, or room temperature drinks; since the plastic table and drinkware of today are so hot, they make any cause for celebration real cool.

Inflatable Fun for the Whole Family

Having a pool is one of the greatest luxuries of summer. I myself have been begging my parents to get one probably since I could talk – and I was talking before I was one. A pool is great for cooling off, exercising, and most importantly, having fun. Inflatable pool toys are absolute essentials for a pool; without these toys, a dip in the pool is somehow incomplete.

My cousins have had a pool for years, and we have worn out many rafts and floats. But by far the best pool toy they ever had was the floating island. This huge toy must have taken hours to blow up, but in my opinion, the time was well worth it. It had a giant green base with sides to lean against and was complete with a banana and its very own palm tree. The floating island had enough room for three or four of us, and we were able to play many games while aboard the island. But even more fun than sitting on the raft with each other was pushing each other off of it, in hopes of becoming the island's sole survivor. This sounds easier than it actually was, for the sheer size of the toy made it nearly impossible for someone to topple it alone. It took some serious teamwork to overturn the island – especially if one of our fathers was the unsuspecting target. Sadly, this floating island has since gone to pool toy heaven, but it has left my cousins and me with many fond memories. This summer, you can make your own poolside memories by investing in some inflatable pool toys. With traditional rafts, floats built for two, and even floating play centers, there is something for everyone.

The classic pool accessory is a simple mat. The most basic mats are just big enough for a single person and come in basic colors. But let's face it – while these mats may be practical, they are a little boring. Try one in a neon color, one with stripes, or one with sharks imprinted on it. If you will be lounging in a pool with many children, or even just with some playful adults, it might be wise to get a clear version so that you can keep an eye on what is going on in the water below you.

If you really want to relax in style, you'll need more than a simple raft. What you should get is a nice lounge chair. These are perfect for tanning and napping. Try the VIP Lounger, which is like a chair and comes complete with a footrest. The Sun Lounge is another good option, and this one includes two cupholders. Both loungers are available at www.poolrafts.com.

For kids, ride-ons and tubes are great options. Try the Bump 'n' Squirt tube, which has a built-in seat and a water squirter with a direct water supply. This tube and many others are available at www.poolrafts.com. For an individual touch, get a ride-on in the shape of your child's favorite animal or pastime. At www.thepooltoystore.com, ride-ons are available in virtually every shape, from motorcycles to baseball gloves, trains to helicopters, and alligators to zebras.

The other great toy my cousins had for their pool was an inflatable boat. As young as we were, rowing the boat across the whole pool seemed like a huge accomplishment. In reality, the boat occupied nearly half the pool. In any case, a little rowing boat is a great choice, especially if you get a heavy duty one that you can also use in a lake or bay. Try the Club 200 Boat Set or the Explorer 200 Boat Set, both at www.poolrafts.com.

Not planning on visiting the lake this summer? Try one of the more adorable options, such as the Giraffe Boat, the Kiddie Canoe, the Whale Boat, and the Billy the Whale Boat and Sail, which looks just like a mini sailboat. All of these children's boats can be found at www.thepooltoystore.com.

If you really want to take your pool to the next level, there are plenty of great options. My favorites include the CoolCastle, which comes complete with a slide, the Octupus Fun Float, which has tubes made out of tentacles and also includes a ring toss game, and the Sofa Island Lounge, which easily fits four adults and reminds me of one of those giant tubes made for water parks. These and many others are available at www.poolrafts.com.

So, even if your idea of paradise is not a giant floating island, an inflatable pool toy is a great way to make your pool the coolest one around.

Shedding Light on Garden Storage

If you are going to be serious about gardening at home, an absolute must is a good garden shed that has everything you need to keep your garden looking beautiful. A garden shed can be small in size, can be built by hiring someone, purchased outright, or you can build it yourself. The wonderful thing about garden sheds is that they give you the freedom of a garage, but you can place a garden shed almost anywhere in your backyard or estate. They also look cute and in some cases can be used for many more things than just for holding your gardening tools.

The basic garden shed is about 10 feet by 8 feet, is made out of wood and is simply an empty space. It is recommended by nearly all experts in the garden shed business that you keep your gardening tools stored in an organized way so that you do not misplace anything.

The best way to make sure that everything in your gardening shed is organized is to have a shelving system and a rack hanging system. Use the shelves to keep small tools such as hand rakes, plastic bags, gloves and water bottles. Use the wall racks for large tools such as hoes, large rakes and shovels. It is also recommended that you keep a tool box in your garden shed, should you ever want to nail something together, like a birdhouse, for your garden. Having a place for everything and making sure that when you are done using your tools, you place them back where you organized them in the first place, will help you make sure that nothing gets lost. This way, you won't find yourself scrambling all over the backyard for a misplaced hand rake.

It is also highly recommended that you have a lighting system in your garden shed. It does not have to be anything fancy, even a small lamp or flashlight will do the trick just fine, but you really have to make sure that your garden shed has light in it just in case you need to get something from it at night. This way, you won't find yourself bumping your head on anything when you run out to the garden shed to grab a screwdriver at night because you can't find the one that is in your house.

You can keep large machinery in your garden shed such as a hand-pushed or driving lawnmower. However, if you are going to build a new garden shed, make sure that you make an access ramp for these machines, and also make sure that the entry way into the garden shed is large enough to fit such items.

Many people find it tempting to flood their garden shed with everything that they don't want to keep in their house such as skis, wakeboards, surfboards, bicycles, and anything else that might fit in there. It is important to remember that a garden shed, however, is for gardening. Although it is tempting to put other items inside the shed, you will find yourself with a mess if you do. Keep these kinds of things for your garage where they belong.

Painting your garden shed is a great way to bond

Slicing Fromage: Plane and Not So Simple

Serving cheese is a serious business. No other food has so many utensils. There are planes, wires, an endless array of knives and different kinds of cutting and serving boards. I am quite sure most of this is unnecessary, but let's sort through the options together and see.

Some people use a cheese plane to shave off a slice of hard cheese. I just don't get why people like doing this. More effort is required to plane off a slice of cheese than is needed to cut a piece off with a knife, because you have to place the blade of the plane just so and then apply just the right amount of pressure to slide the blade along the cheese to remove a slice. Why should eating cheese require work? Also, the cheese inevitably develops a slope, which makes it harder and harder to plane off more cheese. Plus, the cheese plane is usually narrower than the cheese, so the sides of the cheese block need to be cut with a knife anyway.

Even more peculiar to me are platters with a built-in wire for slicing. Rather than picking up a knife and cutting off a piece of cheese, you are required to orient the cheese at the wire, and then use the handle to bring the wire through the cheese. Do people really do this? Who has the time? And frankly, given the number of people who have trouble programming their VCRs, serving cheese on a complicated mechanical contraption just seems mean-spirited to me.

Even worse, though, is the handled cheese wire, which is a piece of wire with a handle on either end. I have no idea how this can be used to cut cheese, but I am quite certain it has been used as a weapon in James Bond movies.

As for knives, I have never been able to determine why there are so many shapes. My three cheese knives came as a set from Crate & Barrel. The shapes are completely different from one another, but I am quite certain that these shapes are not the required shapes, because an Internet search reveals several other cheese knife sets containing a dazzling array of shapes. Some knives have straight ends, some have curved ends, some taper to one point, some have two prongs at the end, some are wide, some are narrow. The one commonality: none comes with instructions telling you what type of cheese is intended for that knife.

One of my cheese knives is fairly dull all around, so that is clearly intended for softer cheeses. The other two are sharper, so they can be used for harder cheeses. But why is one pointed and the other rounded? I do not expect people to spear their cheese and eat it from the knife, nor do I think people should be put to the burden of lifting up a piece of cheese with the rounded edge of the knife. And why don't I have one of the straight-ended knives in my set, or one of those two-pronged knives? It is all so mind-boggling. I hope I am not committing a cheese faux pas.

Moving on to cheese platters, there seems to be only one true requirement: a cheese platter ought to have a flat surface, because it is otherwise difficult to cut a piece of the cheese off. Many cheese platters are made of wood. This is probably a good idea, because the cheese is less likely to slide around and it is easier to scrape up very soft cheese. On the other hand, you cannot put wood in the dishwasher, so I actually like my glass platter from Crate & Barrel. Yet, the choice is not that simple.

As with cheese knives, there are options. Some wood cheese platters have a deep groove running around the platter near the edge. I had never known what this is for until I saw a picture of a cheese platter covered with a glass dome. Leaving aside that most grooved cheese platters are not even sold with a dome (which means that you have to go out and buy a dome that happens to have the exact same circumference as your platter groove), I am not sure what circumstance causes one to unwrap new cheese, place it on a cheese platter and then cover the platter with a dome for a while.

What is so strange about all this is that I cannot think of any other type of utensil or serving piece whose function is so mysterious. I know how to put soup in a bowl and steak on a plate. I know how to put salt in the salt shaker and pepper in the pepper mill. I know how to put wine in a wine glass and beer in a beer mug. Yet I have no idea what cheese knife to buy or use, and the all-knowing Internet seems to be at a loss too. I guess that means we shouldn't worry about it, and just enjoy the cheese.

Don't Be Befuddled by a Muddled Mudroom

Your entryway, front hallway or mudroom is the first thing people see when they enter your home, and yet it is often one of the most cluttered places in the house. While you want this space to be welcoming and attractive, it must also be functional. Use these organizational tips to get your mudroom in order before the chaos of summer begins.

Before you even begin to think about what will go in the mudroom, you need to address the walls and floors. Use a water-resistant latex paint on the walls, and it will be a cinch to remove dirt later on. It is important to choose a flooring option that does not get very slippery, since it will see a lot of wet feet after rainy days. Subtly textured tile and stone fit the bill, and they are easy to clean as well. It is also a good idea to get mats for your entryway, one outside and one inside. For outside, a rough horsehair mat will remove mud from shoes, and for the inside, a machine washable rug will absorb moisture.

Now you can begin to design your mudroom. It is important to remember what the primary uses of the room will be. Decide what you will need before you begin. Ask yourself questions to determine the purpose of the room. Will it function as another room? Do you need space for athletic gear or gardening supplies? And so on. Remember that what works in another house may not work for you. For example, if you have 3 children who all play sports, you will need different storage options than a married couple with no children.

To start, you will need places to hang coats. A row of hooks or pegs on a wall works well, and to help encourage little ones to hang up their own coats, consider adding a second row at a child's height. A free-standing coat tree is another possibility.

A bench is a great addition to a mudroom. It provides a place to sit when putting on and taking off rain boots or soccer cleats, or it can serve as a resting place for backpacks, purses or grocery bags. You can get a bench with clearance underneath for lining up shoes, or you can get one that is more like a chest, and store athletic gear inside. Apply a tough enamel paint to the bench to keep it in good shape. If your mudroom will be seeing footwear that is especially muddy, perhaps if it is right off a garden, consider getting a galvanized tray to store the shoes in.

Built-ins are a great way to make your space work overtime. Create a mini-locker for sports equipment, with shelves built especially for baseball bats, tennis rackets and lacrosse sticks. Install bins or buckets for smaller items, including tennis balls and baseball mitts. Try creating individual cubbies for each individual, which can be used for schoolbooks, athletic equipment, or outdoor gear, such as gloves and hats. To prevent frantic searches for a missing glove, store pairs by clipping them together with a clothespin. Cubbies can also be created using baskets or bins lined up on a shelf. Even a simple table can be useful in a mudroom. It provides counter space for mail and packages, and has room underneath to store shoes or bins. Place a basket on the table to store frequently needed items; for this time of year, fill it with sunscreen, goggles and insect repellent.

If you have pets, the mudroom is a great place to store some of their stuff. Put leashes in a basket or hang them on a peg. If you have more than one pet, buy leashes in different colors for each one, and then you will not have to readjust them to fit. Grooming supplies can also be stored in the mudroom; just place them in the basket.

Are you always losing your keys? Place a labeled key rack right by your door and you will always know where your keys are. This also provides a place for spare keys. Another good thing to put in your mudroom, especially if your family is very active, is a message board. Use a magnetic chalkboard to store messages, schedules and shopping lists. Keep a piece of chalk handy by attaching it with a string. If your mudroom also leads to your backyard, consider stocking it with gardening supplies and even first-aid kits.

With these suggestions, organizing your mudroom should be a breeze. Now, if only organizing the whole house was so simple...

Keep Bugging Me

Despite their reputation as pests, "beautiful bugs" are not, as some may think, an oxymoron. Many of the gazillions of insects, bugs, and spiders that inhabit the Earth are both beautiful and fascinating subjects. With intricate colors, textures, and physical architecture to explore, bugs are considered by many entomologists to be as unique as we are. They are most plentiful in the spring and summer seasons, but they can be found year-round just about everywhere.

Ladybugs, also called lady beetles or ladybird beetles, are a very beneficial group of insects. Lady beetles are natural enemies of many insect pests and it has been demonstrated that a single lady beetle may consume as many as 5,000 aphids in its lifetime. The adult ladybugs have a very characteristic convex, hemispherical to oval body shape. The head is covered by a hood called the pronotum. They are common in most habitats across the United States, and they may be white, yellow, pink, orange, red or black, and usually have spots.

In fact, this is a type of warning coloration to other animals that may try to eat ladybugs. Like many of other brightly colored insects, ladybugs are distasteful to predators. When disturbed, they may secrete an odorous fluid out of their joints to discourage enemies. Depending on the species, ladybugs go through at least one generation per year and during the summer months, all stages can often be found at the same time.

Another popular group of bugs are the fireflies, also called Lightning Bugs, named because they are nocturnal, luminous insects that belong to the beetle family Lampyridae. This family consists of about 1,900 species that inhabit tropical and temperate regions.

Fireflies are soft-bodied beetles whose size ranges from 5 to 25 millimeters in length. On the underside of the abdomen they have special light organs that glow in luminous flashes. The flattened, dark brown or black body is often marked with yellow or orange. Most of the fireflies feed on pollen and nectar.

Mating occurs when the female fireflies produce a short rhythmic flash that attracts the male firefly. The females will sit on the ground in the high grass to flash to certain males only. The female chooses the males based on their flash pattern. The light is produced under a nervous control within special cells, which are richly supplied with air tubes. Only the light from the visible spectrum is emitted. Fireflies do not bite, do not have pincers, do not carry disease and in fact are quite harmless. They cannot even fly fast. They have a life span of 3 weeks to two months.

The Monarch Butterfly, most common species of the milkweed butterflies, so named because their larvae feed on milkweed plants, is found primarily in North America. Adult monarchs have wings that are a striking reddish-brown with black veins and black borders with two rows of white dots. The wingspread may reach 10 cm.

As winter ends, monarchs begin to mate. In March they leave their winter homes, flying north and east. On the northward journey, females stop to lay eggs on the underside of milkweed plants

Dan's HOME Guide

The Porch, The Porch, The Porch is on Fire

I came home from work the other day only to find myself face to face with what I now lovingly refer to as "The Urn." Upon further investigation, and a conversation with my parents, I discovered that this urn-like structure was really an outdoor, wood-burning fireplace. When living in a beach town during the summertime, one would usually think that outdoor heating devices are unnecessary expenditures, but with cold ocean winds and the unexpected changes in temperatures, this is not the case.

There are several factors to consider when taking the plunge into owning an outdoor heating device. Because you are in effect buying an outdoor fireplace, you must always remember safety. Not only the safety of yourself and others in your home, but also that of your neighbors, and of your home structure itself. Some forms of fireplaces just won't do in certain living areas. Once you have picked a safe, clear patio or outdoor area for your heating device, you will have to begin weighing your actual fireplace options. There are four main outdoor heaters: fire pits, fire rings, chimineas, and patio heaters. Yes, in the world of high tech gadgets with multiple options of every product available to suit any and all potential buyers, even something as simple as outdoor fires must be complicated. I will do my best to break down each option for you.

Basically, a fire pit is that rustic cooking area that you can find at a good old-fashioned campground. It is a hole in the ground, surrounded by rocks. This basic idea is both unsightly and dangerous because a fire could easily become out of control and escape the mighty stone fortress of this pit, thereby wreaking havoc on any and all surroundings. A more commercial option of a fire pit would entail a steel mesh or glass container for the fire that sits up off the ground. Benefits of such a pit include a 360-degree view of the fire, and thus also 360 degrees of heat emanating there-from. Also, many of these pits are portable to allow for ease of patio redecorating or furniture adjustments according to the number of guests around the pit.

Along the same lines, a fire ring is a simpler version of the fire pit. As the name implies, this device entails a ring-shaped structure, inside of which a fire is built. It is usually not raised from the ground, and is more reminiscent of true campfires. A fire ring would be great for a vacation home or location where open wood burning is allowed by the city ordinances. But remember, with both fire pits and rings, an open flame should never be left unattended and should not be placed in a crowded or dry area where stray sparks could be lethal.

Patio heaters are probably the devices that most people are familiar with. If you've ever been to a restaurant with outdoor seating options, especially in cooler temperatures, chances are you've come across one or two of these heaters. Patio heaters resemble tall lamps, but they give off heat, not light. They are completely self-contained, providing a draft-free circle of warmth for those sitting near or around them. These heaters run on propane and are ignited with a switch or a lighter, depending on the sophistication of the lamp. The selling point (and most likely also the reason that they are the most expensive option) of these patio heaters is that they have adjustable heat output options, so you can decide how warm the ambience needs to be depending on the weather. Most of these heaters come with wheels so that they can be moved around as well. As I mentioned earlier, they are more expensive than the other options, and their upkeep with propane refills could add to costs.

For a more authentic "fireplace" look and feel to your outdoor heater, you may want to consider the chimineas – the "urn" like structure that my own family recently purchased. These structures provide a similar ambience as an indoor fireplace with their hole in the front for wood and viewing, and then a chimney up on top, which serves to direct the smoke up and away from guests. Chimineas come in copper, cast iron, aluminum, or clay. Like several of the other devices mentioned, chimineas are portable and can be stored in garages or sheds during months when you may not want to sit outside, with a fireplace or without. Despite their aesthetic appeal, chimineas also require precautions like those of the other heaters, and you must also be careful of the chimney and what may be above it when the smoke hits.

Whatever you end up choosing, all options will in effect provide heat, ambience, and the option of year round entertainment. And let's not forget about the obligatory s'mores-making parties.

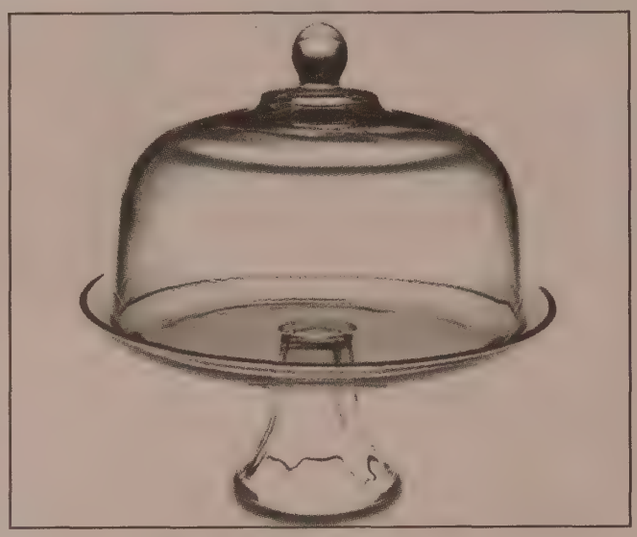
Let Them Serve Cake

When planning a wedding, one of the most important details besides the dress and the flowers is the cake. A wedding cake's beautiful artistry and delicious blends of flavored cake, topped by an amazing confection of white frosting is something to be cherished. After the film has been developed from the honeymoon and your wedding dress is packed away for your future daughter to wear, you are left with the huge piece of cake that you traditionally put in the freezer and take out on your one year anniversary. When my husband and I celebrated our one year, I fished in the freezer the night before and thawed out the year old section of cake. Even though the the frosting was a little wilted, and the cake's flavor left something to be desired, it looked beautiful served on our crystal cake plate that we had received as a wedding gift. It was all about the presentation.

A cake is really a true work of art and it deserves to be showcased in a beautiful way. Cake plates (also know as "Dessert Sets" or "Strawberry Sets") have been around for a very long time.

Fisher's, located on Spring and Main in Sag Harbor, has a variety of decorative cake plates in their store. They have beautiful reproductions, as well as classic vintage styles. Jill from Fisher's talks about her favorite plate, "it's made of pottery and is pink in color with dots. It's a fun cake plate, perfect for a birthday party." Jill mentioned that the store carries plates from the 1920s and 1930s, which cost approximately $85. The reproductions can range from $25 to $85.



At Williims-Sonoma

Hildreth's Department Store – located in Southampton – has beautiful varieties of modern cake plates. Claudia of Hildreth's described a few. According to her, there is a white ceramic cake plate on a stand with scalloped edges by Casafina. The larger size sells for $44.95 and the smaller version is $38.95. Another beautiful plate by Godinger has a white ceramic top (footed cake plate with pewter trim) and comes with a cake server. This item sells for $55.

If you prefer shopping online, www.katieandcompany.com has seventeen beautiful varieties and styles of cake plates and dessert sets. The Dresden China plate caught my eye for its originality and love of fine china. This plate sells for $85 and features fine miniature flowers in various soft colors and gold at its border. The vintage crystal cake plate, which sells for $49, looks just right for that future bride and groom looking for the perfect place to display their beautiful wedding cake. It features a beaded edge and a star cut embedded in the crystal. The floral pattern is interwoven throughout.

Two beautiful cake plates with domed covers are available at www.williamssonoma.com. For $22, your cake can be housed in an exquisite hand blown cake stand, which can also double as a punch bowl, when you turn the domed cover over on the inverted pedestal base. The Square cake stand sells for $22 as well and features a ridges starburst pattern and is made entirely of pressed glass. This stand is a replica of a 1950s style and is tall enough to use at the center of your buffet table or as a centerpiece.

So whether your style is retro, vintage, antique or modern, there are many varieties of cake plates and dessert sets to enhance your dessert table. As many great chefs often say, "It's all in the presentation." Knowing this, it's important to select a plate that matches your style and personality. Something as delicious and fine as a cake deserves to be showcased on the finest plates around.

with a son or daughter, however, choose the color of the paint wisely. It is recommended that you keep your garden shed the same color as your house to maintain a sense of unity with your home. So if you have a white house, paint your garden shed white so that both your house and your garden shed match. If you decide to paint your shed a completely different color, make sure that the shed is located far enough away from your house so that it stands on its own. Leaving a garden shed its natural color is also recommended.

Make sure that all entry ways into the garden shed have a locking mechanism and also make sure that there is no space between the entrance of the garden shed and the ground that would be large enough for a pest to wander into your shed. The last thing that you need is to be reaching for your lawnmower, only to find a garden snake or a mouse scurrying about. Keeping your garden shed door closed at all times can prevent this.

Also, when you are not using your garden shed, be sure that you keep some kind of lock on the door to prevent intruders coming in and also to prevent your children from playing with dangerous tools. Children are attracted to garden sheds because to them they are gigantic forts that they can play in. However, you do not want your little one getting his or her hands on your riding lawnmower just yet.

Garden sheds make a great accent to your home and are also very useful. Keeping your garden shed in good condition will not only look nice, but will encourage you to get out there and take care of your garden and lawn, which of course, is always fun.

–David Lion Rattiner

and die shortly thereafter. The offspring continue to migrate, returning to the same North American regions where their parents lived.

The iridescent scales, which overlap like shingles on a roof, give the wings the colors that we see. Contrary to popular belief, many butterflies can be held gently by the wings without harming the butterfly. Of course, some are more fragile than others, and are easily damaged if not handled very carefully.

Besides being admired, many bugs can actually be beneficial, and gardeners are learning to rely on these "good bugs" to prey on the "bad bugs." Getting beneficial bugs to call a garden home is fairly easy. Provide them with a source of water, such as a shallow container filled with stones, which give the bugs a place to land and drink without drowning. A hedge or windbreak of some kind is a good idea too, since most bugs don't like extremely windy or dusty conditions. A few pollen-producing plants, especially herbs, scattered in and around the garden will also attract beneficial bugs. But by far the easiest way to introduce good bugs to a garden is to buy them, and they're available at nurseries and lawn-and-garden centers or by mail.

It is best to delay the release of good bugs until the bad bugs are already present. When it's time, try releasing bugs inside some sort of temporary enclosure, such as a row cover, just to give them time to adjust to their new surroundings. Keep the area moist, and let them go within a couple of days. To determine what bug to introduce in your garden, the type of bad bug must first be identified.

Dining in the Hamptons

Yes, the Avocado is a Fruit

The apple may have been the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden, but during Aztec times, it was the avocado that was thought to be an aphrodisiac. Fortunately the avocado is produced in quantity today, almost entirely in California. In addition to being delicious, avocados are very good for you. A single medium-sized avocado contains about 15 grams of fiber (and no other carbs), 15 grams of heart-healthy mono-unsaturated fat, lots of potassium, and a variety of vitamins and nutrients common to green fruits and vegetables.

Avocados are ripe when they are still firm but will yield to gentle pressure. Hard avocados usually take a few days to ripen, but the process can be accelerated a bit by placing the avocado in a paper bag with an apple or banana. To peel the avocado, cut along the length of the fruit all the way around, and then separate the two halves. The large pit can be removed with a spoon, and the skin can then be peeled off or the meat scooped out with a spoon. Like apples, avocados brown quickly once you peel them, so it is best to wait until you need the avocado. Drizzling lemon or lime juice over the peeled avocado will slow the browning a bit.

There are lots of ways to enjoy avocados. At their most basic, they are delicious alone. Because of their high fat content, avocados are more filling than many fruits, which makes them ideal for snacking. If you want to add more flavor, sprinkle some salt and pepper, or drizzle a bit of lime juice, or add a splash of Tabasco or a dash of onion powder. In August, when the local tomatoes are at their ripest, a plate of sliced tomato and avocado drizzled with just a bit of olive oil and seasoned with salt and pepper is pure heaven.

Avocado slices are also great in salads. They are always added to Cobb salads, and they will add flavor and texture to just about any salad. They also can pep up sandwiches, and I once had a plain avocado sandwich. Mashed avocado, perhaps seasoned a bit as described above, is a great spread for meat, chicken and even fish. There are many recipes for avocado soups, and I recently saw a recipe for avocado gelato.

Of course, avocado is most well known for making guacamole, the Mexican dip served with tortilla chips and as part of many dishes. Guacamole happens to be one of my specialties, after many summers of experimentation with ingredients. Here is how I do it.

2 avocados, just ripe
1 small red onion
1 medium jalapeno pepper
1 lime (2 if the lime isn't juicy)
1 medium tomato
Three or four sprigs of cilantro
Tabasco, if needed
Salt and pepper

Notes: Because you will be mashing the avocados, it is best that they not be at their peak of ripeness. Of course, unripened avocados lack flavor, but try to pick avocados that are just becoming ripe. Some guacamole recipes call for garlic. While I love garlic on almost everything, it has no place in guacamole. I use red onion for its visual appeal, but you can substitute any onion you prefer. I use most of the seeds and ribs from the jalapeno pepper for a lot of zing, but those parts can be discarded for a more subtle heat. Some people use lemon instead of lime. I find a lemon a bit too acidic for guacamole, plus lime is such a classic addition to many Mexican foods. For those of you who hate cilantro, it can be omitted.

Do not cut and peel the avocados until you have completed the following steps. Finely chop the jalapeno. Chop the onion well but not quite finely. Juice the lime. Cut the tomato into six or eight pieces, scrape out all of the juice and seeds, leaving just the flesh, and roughly chop the tomato flesh. Roughly chop a handful of cilantro leaves.

Combine about 2/3 each of the onion and jalapeno pepper (all of the pepper if you discarded the seeds and ribs) in a bowl. Peel the avocados, clean away any brown spots, very roughly chop them, and add them to the bowl. Pour in enough lime juice to get the avocados wet, but not so much that you will have a reservoir of lime juice at the bottom. Using a fork, mash the avocado into a spread, but don't go overboard, as there will be more mixing, and it is nice to have a few small avocado chunks anyway. This mashing should have combined all the ingredients, but if not, mix to combine. Add the tomato (reserving some if it seems like a lot for the amount of avocado you have), and mix to combine. Add salt and pepper generously to taste.

At this point, taste the guacamole and add a bit more lime juice, onion or jalapeno, as needed. Each of the flavors should contribute to, but not overpower, the avocado. Add Tabasco if you still need more zing after using the jalapeno pepper. Add more salt to bring the flavors out more, if needed. Once the balance is right, add the cilantro, and mix. Serve immediately, or wait about 1/2 hour for the flavors to combine more fully.

Dining in the Hamptons

Gorgeous Garnishes

Restaurants, in the past known for their food and perhaps décor, are these days famous for their celebrity chefs, bold architecture, unique menu items and often, their signature drinks. In fact, some owners insist their bartenders create one original cocktail per season, which whimsically satiate those waiting in excruciatingly long lines for a coveted table. But sometimes it's the presentation or even the garnish that takes a rather simple concoction up to the level of art, or if not, at least something artistic and interesting and worthy of cocktail party chatter. You may remember the infamous Blow-Pop martini created at the now defunct Grange Hall restaurant in Greenwich Village. Or the Sakatini served at Bamboo in East Hampton, which is a killer concoction of vodka, sake and julienne cucumber slices. There is also the espresso martini garnished with floating coffee beans, or the chocolate martini with a Hershey's kiss in the bottom.

At home too, you can make drinks that will amuse your guests and add sparkle to your party, with very little effort. One fruity idea is to freeze fresh raspberry juice (pureed raspberries with a bit of added water and superfine sugar) in ice trays with a curl of lemon peel in each cube, and then, when frozen, pop one into a flute of champagne. Edible flowers frozen in ice cubes also add an elegant touch to any drink you might want on the rocks.

Around the office, the subject of frozen grapes as a snack has come up over and over again. The not quite crunchy, not quite chewy texture is a little off-putting to some, while others find it the pinnacle of refreshment. Arguably they are delicious added to a chilled glass of white zinfandel that has been spiked with grape juice. If you mix the wine with the juice, red or white, shake in a cocktail shaker with ice cubes, strain into a lovely glass, and add frozen grapes, you've made fun.

Herbs and vegetables can raise the interest in a cocktail too, if you go beyond the expected celery stalk in the Bloody Mary, cucumber slice on your Pimm's cup and mint leaf in your Mojito. For fun, try a carrot curl, sprig of watercress or a stalk of scallion. Or, use a wooden skewer to capture two or three grape tomatoes and let it stand tall in your highball glass.

The following martini recipes, from foodtv.com, use unexpected combinations of herbs and fruits that are delicious.

Lemon-Thyme Martini
For 4 servings

2 cups water
2 cups granulated sugar
Zest of 1 lemon
1 handful fresh thyme sprigs
1/2 cup lemon-flavored vodka, such as Citron
1/4 cup Lemoncello
Candied lemon rind, for garnish

Directions:
To make the herb-simple syrup for the martini:
1. Combine the water, sugar and lemon zest in a pot over medium heat.
2. Gently simmer for 3 minutes until the sugar is dissolved, swirling the pot over the heat now and then. Do not allow to boil or get dark.
3. Put the thyme in a mason jar or glass container and pour the sugar syrup on top; allow to steep while it cools for 1-2 hours to infuse the herb flavor into the syrup.
4. Strain to remove the solids.
5.In a martini shaker filled with ice, combine the vodka, Lemoncello, and 4 tablespoons of the herb-syrup.
6. Shake well until frothy and strain into 4 chilled martini glasses. Float candied lemon rind in each glass for great presentation.

Pineapple Cocktail
For 1 serving

1 1/2 ounces pineapple juice
1 ounce vodka
1 ounce orange liqueur, recommended: Cointreau
1/2 ounce freshly squeezed lime juice
Turbinado sugar, for the rim (optional)
Fresh wedges of pineapple
Maraschino cherry
Orange slice

Chill a martini glass in the freezer. Fill a cocktail shaker with ice. Add the pineapple juice, vodka, orange liqueur, and lime juice. Cover and shake vigorously, until combined and chilled, about 30 seconds.

Scatter some turbinado sugar onto a small plate, wet the rim of the glass and dip into sugar. Strain the drink into the chilled glass. Skewer the pineapple, orange and cherry and drop into the cocktail. Cheers.

EAST END KID: KIDS IN CANDYLAND

By EMILY HART POST
With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

With a title like that, you would assume that meant Dylan's Candy Bar, and you would assume right. This is the fourth year of Kids In Candyland, a benefit to help Lenox Hill Neighborhood House. And as expected, it was a kid's fun-house of balloon making, cookie decorating and eating, story telling, face painting, singing, little hamburgers, magic, goodybags and of course, candy! Yea! I think the moms don't eat much candy, because they are very thin. This party benefited Lenox Hill Neighborhood House to help children's programs for those kids and families that need that help.

JUST FOR KIDS

Fabulous Flip Flops

All year long, we long to kick off our shoes, and when summer comes, we are finally able to do just that. For kids, running around barefoot is one of the ultimate summertime pleasures. And naturally, summer is full of opportunities to indulge in this pleasure – afternoons spent playing tag in the grass, running through the sprinkler, or helping in the garden, and evenings spent trying to catch lightning bugs or walking along the beach. But there are times when shoes are not optional, and while this may cramp a child's style, there are many footwear options specially suited for the summer season to keep kids comfortable.

In summer, no one wants to wear sneakers, so the next best thing for an action-packed day is a heavy-duty sandal. The ideal sandal has Velcro straps, so kids can easily put them on and take them off as needed – because when you get to the beach, every second counts. The Columbia castle rock sandal is a great choice, with colors for both boys and girls. These water-friendly sandals, which are even available in infant sizes, can be found at Columbia Sportswear's website, www.columbia.com.

Those sandals are great for beach use, but why not try water shoes? These shoes are perfect for trips to the beach because they protect your feet from the hot pavement in the parking lot and from the sometimes rocky ocean floor. Usually made of mesh, these shoes are comfortable and quick-drying. A wide selection is available at www.modells.com.

But for summer shoes, nothing beats the flip-flop. Versatile is an understatement when it comes to this great footwear option. They can be dressed up or dressed down, and are inexpensive enough to buy multiple pairs, even one in every color! Many adult flip-flop lines have children's versions, and flip-flops are easy to find. But the reason why the flip-flop is the number one option for summer footwear is that you can create your very own version. Designing your own flip-flops is a great way to personalize your shoes, and it is the perfect activity for a rainy day. And kids won't mind putting on shoes they've made themselves!

To begin, you will need cloth ribbon, fringe, or similar trim, scissors, flip-flops with foam soles and foam or fabric straps and a low-temperature glue gun. Once you have chosen your trim, cut a length to fit around the outer wall of each sole with a 1/2-inch overlap. Then cut separate pieces of trim for the left and right sides of the foot strap. These pieces should overlap 1/2 inch where the ends meet in the center.

To attach the trim to the sole, evenly apply a line of hot glue to a two-inch section of the foam, using the low-temperature glue gun tip to quickly spread it to a width that's slightly narrower than the ribbon. Firmly press the end of the trim onto the glued portion so that it sticks well, then smooth it toward the unglued section. Continue applying glue and attaching the trim in two-inch increments until you've fully circled the sole.

Repeat the same process to attach the two pieces of strap trim to the foot straps. Let the flip-flops dry for at least an hour before testing them out.

Another option for decorating flip-flops is to use fabric flowers. You can choose a large flower for the center, such as a sunflower or daisy, or use smaller blossoms and line them up on the foot straps. To make these flower flip-flops, first cut the stems from the fabric flowers. Then use a hot glue gun to glue the flowers in place. A dime-sized amount should be enough to keep the flower attached.

The Bridgehampton Child Care Summer Program

The Bridgehampton Child Care Center in collaboration with Bridgehampton High School will be offering two very unique programs this summer. The High School will be offering an enrichment program from 9 AM - 12 PM for Bridgehampton students, and a second session from 1 PM - 4 PM. These same students will be taking part in The Center's summer recreational program which will include: Basketball, Softball, Arts & Crafts and many other activities. The students in the enrichment program will not be charged a fee as long as their parents are residents of Bridgehampton. Space is limited to 60 students. For non-residents there will be a fee for the half day sessions. The fee for non-residents is $75 dollars a week, in advance. The fee for the whole summer will be $375.

The Bridgehampton Child Care Center
Summer Program will run from July 11th through August 12th

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

The hardest part of growing up is actually playing the part – being responsible, not acting on impulse, living within one's means and a list of other mature attributes. But, when it comes to car people, none of these apply, because, let's face it, true car lovers, whatever their age, simply refuse to grow up. As one of the leaders of this eternally immature pack, let me present an argument, however lame, as to why it's all right for car lovers to act like Peter Pan as far as automobiles are concerned.

Why do car lovers go ga ga whenever they see a truly beautiful automobile, no matter how impractical it may be? Take for instance the relatively new Ferrari Enzo, certainly one of the most beautiful exotic super cars. With a price tag of over $500,000, it reaches speeds of 200 miles per hour. The two big questions I pose are, first, what percentage of you out there have a spare half million dollars to spend on a car, and second, where the hell are you going to use that kind of performance? It's a kid thing. That Ferrari might as well be a toy car that you lusted after at age five or a mountain bike that you dreamed of as a high school freshman. As a grown-up, and I use that term loosely, that Ferrari is the Angelina Jolie of automobiles. You lust after it because of its looks, but in your heart, of course you know that you'll never have it.

This is a pattern among car lovers. I had a passion for Jaguar XK-Es while my friends had dreams of Porsches. These dream cars were attainable, but impractical. In the sixties, very few American mechanics knew how to fix foreign cars and imported cars of that era were not that dependable. But we were the hot kids on the block, we sports car drivers, so we put up with all the crap that those beautiful sports cars threw at us. In our minds, the biggest sin a guy could commit was to be seen driving a four-door automobile.

The child in all of us knew that we were right, but somewhere deep in the recesses of our brains, we were aware that the sexy sports cars in our driveways had their drawbacks. Over the years I went skiing in Vermont in three different cars. When I was younger it was a well worn 1955 Porsche Speedster. Sure, my black Speedster looked so cool while driving north on the New York State Thruway with the skis strapped on the factory ski rack mounted diagonally over the rear engine compartment. I looked so cool because I was actually freezing inside that car. The heating system on all those early Porsches stank, and the Speedster did not even have rollup windows, but snap-in drafty side curtains.

The next car that I used as a ski vehicle was a 1964 Ferrari Lusso. It was certainly more comfortable than the Porsche, but I never really enjoyed the drive to Vermont because I was always worried about sliding off the road in the ice and denting the beautiful and very expensive bodywork.

The third car, admittedly lowering my standards, was a 1964 four door Citroen ID 19 Sedan. True, I was a turncoat for driving a sedan, but my only alibi is that this was the weirdest and most technically advanced four door car presently produced. This is what the kid in me loved about this car and it was the best ride that I ever had between Manhattan and ski country to this day.

There were two great "car kids" that I had the pleasure of knowing, both of whom had houses in the Hamptons. They have since passed away within the last two years. I knew Bob Grossman when he owned Foreign Cars of Nyack. In fact, on any given weekend, Bob would let me test drive any one of the many used exotic cars that he had for sale. He was always gracious, always a gentleman with a little trace of a kid's gleam in his eye when it came to talking about fast and beautiful cars. Another, John Weitz, was one of the most elegant men that I have ever met. He was a distinguished, creative designer and writer with a passion for motorsports. Like Grossman, he was a gentleman racer in the fifties and sixties, although he never met with the great racing success of Bob Grossman. But like Grossman, John's character changed into that of a kid, full of enthusiasm when he talked about anything related to automobiles.

There is one other "kid" I met who liked cars. We met at a business meeting near his factory in Stuttgart, Germany. His name was Dr. Ferry Porsche and he built sports cars. He was about eighty years old when we met, and has since passed away. He was sharp as a tack and drove daily to work in his very modified Porsche. When discussing Porsches past and present, he always referred to them as "our cars" with a little gleam in his eyes, like a child with a new Christmas toy.

All you "kids" out there, drive carefully. The saying "He who dies with the most toys, wins" is bull. He who dies with the most toys is dead...period.

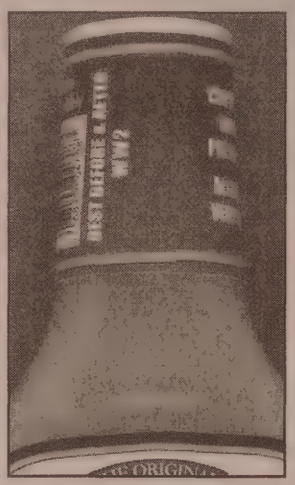
TwentysomeThing... By David Lion Rattiner

The Expiration Date

I was home at my Dad's house on Saturday afternoon looking in the refrigerator for something to eat. My buddy Tom, with whom I went to college, was over for lunch as well. One of the wonderful things about living at home is the free food. My Dad doesn't seem to mind that I eat the food in the refrigerator. In fact he encourages me to.

As Tom and I gazed into the cold abyss that is my refrigerator at my Dad's house, we both quickly realized that making lunch from the ingredients in the refrigerator was going to be a difficult task. You have to keep in mind that only men live at my house and we are all incredibly lazy when it comes to purchasing food. There are three of us: my Dad, my younger brother Gabriel, and me. None of us have a clue how to cook either. Also, because of all the dinners and fundraisers Dad goes to, food rarely gets purchased. How my brother and I manage to find food in the refrigerator week after week has been a mystery. That is, until last Saturday.



As Tom and I gazed, we became discouraged. There were no lunch meats, there was no tuna fish, and there was no chicken. No, instead, on the top shelf, there were three half gallon orange juice containers, all three with about one-sixth inch of orange juice left in the containers. Then there were five different milk cartons, all at least half empty, of various different milk types, then on the second shelf were two packages of bacon, a carton of eggs, two pounds of Swiss cheese, parmesan cheese, half a stick of butter, and containers of old, unidentifiable foods that appeared to be mixed with mayonnaise. There was also a prepackaged, ready to eat salad and on the shelves on the door were two old ketchup bottles and about seventeen different salad dressings.

Tom and I gazed into the refrigerator for about half an hour. We were plotting. What could we possibly make out of such odd foods? Then, Tom spoke up. "Let's make a Swiss-cheese omelet with bacon and then make a salad," he said.

"Fine with me," I replied and the two of us got to work.

Tom took out the bacon, eggs, and the Swiss cheese while I took out the salad and one of the bottles of salad dressing. After fiddling with the package, I opened the salad and dumped it into two separate bowls, then I put the salad dressing out on the table. I then set the table and walked over to Tom who had fired up the stove and was cooking the bacon and eggs. Tom is Italian. He knows how to cook. The dogs came into the kitchen and began to stir about, smelling the bacon.

Tom finished up the bacon and eggs at amazing speed and we sat down at the table. Both of us were ready to start with the salad. Tom began to pour the salad dressing on the salad when I noticed something odd. The expiration date on the salad dressing did not sit well with me. As he drenched his salad with the honey mustard salad dressing I noticed that the date on the glass bottle, stamped in extremely faded lettering read 0802. I examined it again to verify when suddenly I noticed Tom's fork rising up to his mouth. The thought ran through my head to actually let him eat the salad, I was really curious to see what would happen, but the religious side of me told me to rescue Tom from eating a salad dressing that had been sitting in my refrigerator since my sophomore year of college. "TOM, NOOOOOOOOOO!!!!" In slow motion, I whacked the fork right out of Tom's hand. The salad went soaring into the air and the fork hit the floor with a jingle. The dogs scrambled after the food. When they got to it, they took a sniff, and walked away.

"What the hell is wrong with you, Dave?"

"Dude, that salad dressing is expired."

Tom looked at the bottle, squinted his eyes at the date, then dropped the bottle on the table and stood out of his chair. He was shocked. I then went into the refrigerator and looked at the shelves on the door to see if there was another bottle of salad dressing that had a date on it after June 2005. Of course, there wasn't. I looked at bottle after bottle; creamy ranch 0603, thousand island 0304, peppercorn ranch 0203. The bottles were all expired. As I was looking at the bottles, literally stupefied, I noticed out of the corner of my eye that Tom was going for the bacon on the table, lifting it to his mouth with his hands. The thought hit me that the bacon could be expired. Instantly, I once again whacked the food out of Tom's hand. The bacon went hurdling across the kitchen hitting the floor with a thud. Like lightning, the dogs raced after it. One of the dogs, the bigger Wheaton terrier known to the family as Moo, got to it first and gobbled it up.

This was a small relief to me because if the bacon was bad, I was sure that the dog wouldn't have eaten it. Tom and I both walked over to the garbage can where we looked at the bacon package, which sure enough, had an expiration date on it. The date read, "May 2005."

"Are you kidding me?" I yelled.

I then looked at the egg carton, which also had an expiration date. It read May 18, 2005. Close, but no cigar. I began to fear for the life of Moo, who had eaten the entire slice of bacon. Better not tell my Dad about this should he get sick, I reasoned. If he dies, I'll come clean, but if he gets sick, I know nothing.

Tom and I each ate a slice of Swiss cheese, which is usually for the dogs' eating pleasure, and called it a day. We started throwing everything out, the eggs, bacon, and salad dressing. It was at this point, my Dad walked in. "You guys are eating out of the fridge? That's great, eat up, it's good for you. I think that I'll go shopping. We need to get some more Swiss cheese, milk, and orange juice. I think we are running low. Is that the last of the bacon and salad dressing?"

Take a Hike with Ken Kindler

Canyons and Valleys and Laurels, Oh My!

The only large gaps in the 125-mile Paumanok Path are in Southampton. Thanks to the Community Preservation Fund, Laura Smith, a very energetic Town employee, and the Southampton Trails Preservation Society (STPS, 537-5202) we are closing one of the big gaps in the trail in the North Sea / Noyac area. A local resident and I were just west of Laurel Valley painting the white rectangular blazes that mark the Path, and I was noticing that the trail was full of laurels in bloom. This is why I decided to do an article on laurel walks this week.

The entrance to Laurel Valley is about one mile south of Noyac Road on Deerfield Road in Southampton. Call STPS and purchase a map of Laurel Valley County Park; this system of trails is a perfect place for a hiker of any ability to bond with nature. I wrote an article about Laurel Valley for Dan's Papers last year. During the winter I put it behind the "Explore" link of the www.hike-li.org website. This time I am writing about Laurel Canyon in Montauk.

The dock at Rod's Valley Park

The Paumanok Path was routed through Laurel Canyon only a couple of years ago. It can be accessed from the Montauk Recycling Center or at the old Navy Base.

The Recycling Center is on the north side of Rt. 27. Take Montauk Highway to the Montauk Recycling Center, two miles east of Hither Hills Overlook and one mile west of Montauk Village. Park on the left side of the Recycling Center entrance road. The trail begins on the right side of this road, directly across from the parking area. This portion of the Parkway Trail is not part of the Paumanok Path, and it is not marked with white blazes. However, it is very easy to follow, and within two-tenths of a mile, it intersects with the marked Paumanok Path. When you reach the Paumanok Path, you will follow it to your left where it leaves the eastern section of the Parkway Trail to head north for about a quarter mile to a panoramic view of Fort Pond Bay. If you follow the Path for another two miles it will take you through Laurel Canyon and onward to the Bay.

If you'd like to walk along a rugged coast before or after a hike, I suggest you take this hike north to south, starting at Rod's Valley Park. This park was previously known as Navy Road Park. It is situated at the western end of Fort Pond Bay near Rocky Point. You will find a large parking lot here with some primitive plastic restrooms and if you enjoy saltwater fishing, you will be excited by a huge 60' deep-water pier where submarines once docked. To get there from the west, travel three miles past Hither Hills Overlook, make a left onto Second House Road and follow it for one mile. Where the road curves continue traveling straight onto Navy Road. Cross over the railroad tracks, take the next left and follow this road to its end.

After you park, walk across a grass field and head towards the dock. You will come to a dirt path running northwest along the shoreline. Follow this unmarked trail past an information kiosk and then after a short distance turn left onto the Paumanok Path and continue following the white rectangular blazes. The entire Paumanok Path in East Hampton is easy to follow thanks to the hard work of the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society (EHTPS) maintenance crew. There is a trail map of East Hampton that is helpful for keeping you on the right path and will alert you to many more hiking adventures in this area. For information about EHTPS or this map call Richard at 631-324-1127.

Follow the Path southwest over the railroad tracks. Referring to the trail map you will see that where the white blazed trail turns left onto Riah's Path you can take two alternative paths. If you don't see the blazes, backtrack until you find where you missed your turn. For much of the rest of the hike you will be walking through a laurel woods that at times becomes a laurel tunnel with an upper canopy of oak and occasionally beech trees. One thing that I took note of was the abundance of low-bush blueberry with set fruit. I intend to come back here in a month or so and compete with the local wildlife for the ripe berries.

Handbags...Inside and Out

Every woman has purchased a handbag that they deemed "perfect" at one time. But what defines perfect? An elegant shiny new bag may be a disaster on the inside. Organizing the items, which is the purpose of a handbag is intended, can be a struggle.

No matter who the designer may be, Prada, Fendi, Chanel, etc., the key to having the perfect handbag is simple organization. Some people may consider the inside of one's handbag to be the window to their personality. I tend to agree.

Let's open my bag (also known as the bottomless pit) for starters. It seems no matter how many times I clean my bag, it becomes the same mess by the next day. Receipts, makeup, wallet, keys and much more clutter my satchel.

Keys? Keys are the one item I'm always in search of and struggling to find in a hurry. And each time I throw them back into my bag, I'm hopeful that I will quickly find them again. Of course, if you have a smaller bag, it makes it much easier to locate items. However, small bags don't work for many women because we need the extra room to hold our necessary items. Although I'm sure some of those "necessary" items are really unnecessary.

Do you really need to carry a copy of the world atlas or bottle of wine? OK, I'm exaggerating, but I do think there are limits as to what we should or shouldn't put in our bags. The problem is that for every one item, today there are many extras. A simple lipstick has turned into a lipstick, lip plumper, lip liner, lip gloss, lip moisturizer and so on. What's a girl to do? We need our beauty items.

Perhaps using a bag with compartments is the key. Compartments allow for organization. My latest bag is "compartment-less," and it's a nightmare! Every time I open it, I don't know what I'll find. I think, the more room I have, the more I can carry. Last week I emptied the entire contents of my P.O. Box into my bag. And my wallet is another story. I feel some need to save every receipt, business card, promotional cards and shopping list. The one thing I don't have enough of is "cash."

Like anything in life, organizing your purse is a matter of routine and dedication. Once you have decided to simplify and limit the clutter, you're ready to start shopping. Selecting the appropriate bag is important and, as we discussed earlier, it depends on your needs. Some women carry a different bag each day, while others change according to season.

The most popular top designer bags can cost upwards of $10,000. The famous Hermes Birkin bag and Kelly bag (named after Grace Kelly in the 50s) are two of the most highly sought after bags by the elite. It was that same Kelly bag in red that was given as a gift from Kate Hudson's older and "married" French lover in the film Le Divorce. Sometimes a girl will go to great lengths to get her hands on a great bag. As for shoppers on the East End, there are a few places to check out.

Collette's on Jobs Lane in Southampton has a great selection of vintage and new bags by such designers as Fendi, Gucci, Prada, Chanel and of course Hermes. Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton is also a great spot to check out the latest designs where you can also find Prada, Burberry, Kate Spade and much more.

For a newer, more casual and versatile bag, check out Paulpac on Jobs Lane. Also, vintage Chanel can be found at the Lynn Stoller Collection (Out of the Closet, Bridgehampton). And of course, don't forget Coach on Main Street in East Hampton.

Handbags are essential. We can't go anywhere without one, and they should be considered the "treasure chest" of our lives. If you don't have the budget to spend money on a top designer bag, there are a wide variety of elegant bags available that won't make you go broke.

IMAGINE TOMORROW

Judy Patterson, founder of Imagine Tomorrow, a franchise computer center, has developed a unique educational computer center that puts the latest interactive technology in the hands of children as young as two years old. "Nobody has learning centers using computers for kids at this young age," says Ms. Patterson. In a safe and fun environment, toddlers can learn computer skills while building a strong educational foundation. The children combine the entertainment of television with the latest interactive software in a unique classroom setting. The children are able to explore the Internet and learn about the latest technology terms and concepts in a simulated interactive program. Imagine Tomorrow is truly a family affair. Patterson has given others the opportunity to bring the Imagine Tomorrow concept to their own location. Ms. Patterson has already licensed the Imagine Tomorrow computer program in 27 locations throughout the East Coast. Centers have already opened in New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Virginia. The Long Island locations are in Port Jefferson and East Northport.

If you are interested in starting your own center, call Imagine Tomorrow toll-free at 877- 806-1830 or visit: www.imaginetomorrow.com.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

What a week! Friends came out for a visit and we did some serious shopping and beaching..... Come shop with me!

I am searching for the perfect cupboard and we stopped in to check out the furniture sale at Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street in Southampton, and also in Bridgehampton and East Hampton. The entire collection of Stanley furniture including dining tables, chairs, beds, dressers, armoires, benches, entertainment units, coffee tables, end tables and more are 30% off. Included in this huge sale are stock merchandise and special orders (with some restrictions, I may add.....) I'm there! The furniture sale is ending on June 30.

While you're strolling down Main Street in Southampton, and we all do that, stop in at Saks Fifth Avenue for a "Summer Weekend Trunk Show Extravaganza" on Friday, June 24 and Saturday, June 25. The "Armani Collezioni Trunk Show" fall and winter 2005 women's collection will be on Friday and Saturday only from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Look for the Jane Gorden Jewelry Trunk Show, M.J. Savitt Jewelry Trunk Show, Luella Bartley and Mulberry Designer Trunk Show that will be strutting their stuff and one of my favorites, La Prairie Sunday event in the Women's Shoe Salon on Saturday only. Don't miss the Sisley Paristan-To-Go Event while you're there!

Stop in to Pier One Imports for a look at their cool new arrivals. I found great hostess gifts such as beaded bottle openers, cork screws and bottle stoppers for only $15. If you really love beads, must-haves are the beaded napkin rings for $3 and the beaded wine rack for $28. A great find was the watercolor Margarita glass and pitcher from $8 to $20. Of course, we did not walk out empty handed and neither will you.

Waterstone Pottery, Southampton

Waterstone Pottery at 76 Mariner Drive in Southampton is having a sale with 30% to 50% off select merchandise. There are over 3,000 wholesale priced terracotta, fiberglass, glazed, cement, wood, and metal planters to choose from around the world at very affordable prices. Give a call at 631-283-5747 or log onto their website at www.H20stone.com.

Have you heard about the "Super Swap" at Main Beach Surf & Sport in Wainscott this upcoming weekend, June 25 and 26? An annual event that is always on my calendar, you can buy or sell tons of used summer gear and enjoy a free BBQ while you're there! Call them at 631-537-2716 for more information.

Exclusive at White's Pharmacy on Main Street in East Hampton, there is a free Shiseido Benefiance "gift bag" with any $15 purchase or more Shiseido product. Now this is the deal that I love to find!

If you haven't been to the Crazy Monkey Gallery on Main Street in Amagansett for a while, you should stop in and check out Grace Martin's "It's A Magnolia" collection of brand new tunics, caftans and pareos. If you don't love the current "boho" look, check out the new summer jewelry, lots of chunky beads and shells, tunics, ponchos and caftans that are silk chiffon that make great beach cover ups and cocktail party outfits.

Being Cinderella Man

You are overweight. You are sluggish. You live fat and rich. Processed foods and floods of booze have made you slow. You are not the person you once were. You are comfortable. This is bad. But there is a way out of this. There is a way back. You were young once. In your own way you were hungry. You were hungry for life, hungry for success, hungry for love – maybe you were literally hungry. Now you have comfort. Comfort is bad. Meditate on this for a moment. Close your eyes and visualize that person who died with your hefty paycheck, that man buried beneath your car and your house and your cell phone that seems to constantly whisper in your ear. Silence it. Be the woman you want to be. Visualize her. Visualize him.....

Open your eyes. Focus. Recently, Cinderella Man opened in theaters across the country to great reviews. The film follows the story of James Braddock, a depression-era boxer who had it all until the crash of '29 and a hand injury sent him spiraling down into a new life of poverty and desperation. In the years that followed, Braddock suffered many losses in the ring and in his miserable life. He could no longer pay to heat the house for his family. He could no longer afford milk or even the wilted slices of bologna his loving wife fried for every meal. Braddock staged a comeback. He became world champion. It was a miracle. It was born of need, of hunger – real hunger. This is what you need.

Reverting back to an earlier and sparser time does not mean that you should pull some kind of mid-life crisis Houdini-act on your family and friends. You have to strike a balance. At this time, you just might consider stripping down the walls of excess you've built around yourself. Turn off the cell phone and use it for only real emergencies or business matters that need actual immediate attention. If all business matters seem to need immediate attention, reconsider the way you conduct them. It's essential that you allow for quiet moments alone in life. Turn off the TV. Clearing a space that's just for you is the first step in the journey to a champion's existence. Now occupy that space whole-heartedly. Allow no one to disrupt it. Remember that you are not alone, you are simply choosing to be without others for a bit of time each day. Use this time to consider what you really want out of life. And no, you don't want to make more money or buy a better car. You want to find the purest form of your character. Let the starvation begin.

Native Americans use the Vision Quest to discover their greater purpose. A hike into the woods or mountains for many days without food would eventually reveal to them their totem. The suffering brought hallucinations and then clarity. You will do this in a more extended and safe way. Commune with nature. Exercise until it hurts. Eat only when necessary. Eat simple. Remember that Rocky always had to get to the nitty-gritty to find his courage and strength to win. You don't need to go to Russia and jog the tundra to do it. You don't need to punch frozen meat. Run our beautiful beaches at sunrise. Swim great distances in the ocean. Suffer to realize why you are lucky not to have to suffer. Always maintain a level of physical hunger. If you leave yourself unsatisfied you will work harder. You will become hard and fast. You will look around and see what the world is missing. Consumption and fulfillment of your every desire makes you weak. An unknown philosopher said, "Pain is weakness leaving the body." Think on that. Nietzsche wrote, "The belly is the reason man does not so easily take himself for a god." Become your own god. Shed everything you don't need. Don't force this choice on those around you. The sooner you realize this is for you and only you, the easier it will be to accomplish. In time, what really matters will become apparent, and you will be stronger and more resolved in everything you do.

Braddock won out of need and with the power of his heart. You are a winner. Your mind is clear. Your body is strong. Life is appreciated. Your will has benefited those that surround you. You are a champion. Stay hungry.

Clippity Clop with Ali Spencer

Horse whispering. This phrase inevitably conjures up one of two images in people's heads – either a person cupping a hand over a horse's ear and whispering sweet nothings in a soothing voice, or Robert Redford in the 1998 film. But horse whispering, or natural horsemanship, has nothing to do with talking to the horse (in words, at least) and in recent years has become increasingly popular with English disciplines such as show jumping. And over the past weekend, a real life horse whisperer, Greg Eliel, held a clinic at Mecox Bay Farm in Bridgehampton.

Although horses are large, powerful animals, they are actually quite docile, and want nothing more than to please their owners. For years, or perhaps more correctly, for all time, the techniques of training a horse have focused on breaking the horse's spirit and gaining physical control of the animal. Natural horsemanship throws all of those ideas out the window and aims to train the horse using a language he can understand. Instead of forcing the horse to do what we want through fear or pain (or both), the goal of natural horsemanship is for the horse to willingly perform for us because we found a way for him to understand what we are asking him to do.

Greg Eliel's personal goal is to "help the horse feel confident and secure in our environment" by understanding the way the horse's mind works. Much of what can be learned from natural horsemanship requires that horse people rethink their approach to horseback riding. A horse does not know how to communicate with humans. It's our job to learn how to communicate with them. It all comes down to empathy and putting ourselves in the horse's shoes. Horse people must learn to respect the horse and the fact that horses are very sensitive animals, aware of every movement that the people around them make. And horse people must be able to look objectively at their behavior, decide if it is having a positive or negative effect on their horses and change it accordingly. For a natural horseman, the comfort and security of the horse is always the top priority.

A significant part of this philosophy is achieved through "groundwork" rather than riding. Groundwork is really the foundation of horsemanship, because if a horse is not responsive on the ground, he will most certainly not be responsive while being ridden. In natural horsemanship, the purpose of groundwork is to "reveal..... areas of resistance in the horse. Every 'hole' in the foundation has the potential to be a problem from the saddle." At one point in the clinic, Greg Eliel had the horses on a short rope, circling around their owners. From this position, he could see if the horses were at all stiff in their jaws, necks, back or hindquarters. By using body language, repetition and reward, the horses quickly loosened up their areas of resistance and relaxed their bodies and their minds.

Perhaps the clearest form of communication between people and horses is the application and release of pressure. Pressure can be anything from squeezing a horse with your legs to pulling back on the reins. Both are commands a horse can understand. When pressure was released, more often than not the horses would lick their lips. This is a sign of relaxation and shows the owners that they correctly communicated with their horses.

In another exercise, large paper bags were placed on the ground and the horses were asked to step over them. Naturally, some of the horses balked at this idea. Mr. Eliel did not punish the horses for being scared of the bags and he did not force them over the bags through intimidation and fear. Instead he was very patient and encouraged the horses to inch closer to the bags, step by step. Every time the horses came closer to the obstacle, he rewarded them by stepping away, which was a release of pressure. In a very short period of time the horses were stepping over the bags like they would a rail on the ground. An exercise such as this helps a horse to build confidence in himself and in his owner, which is very important when jumping an intimidating fence or walking past a piece of tarp blowing in the wind.

Natural horsemanship is like a key that unlocks the horse's mind. It is truly an incredible thing to watch a horse begin the day unsure of himself and distrustful of humans and, in a few hours, be totally relaxed, head down, eyes practically closed. Such a transformation does not mean that the horse is fixed, that whatever problems he has are now erased. A lot of patience is required, but with consistent work, horses will be better behaved and more secure in all aspects of their lives.

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Rejuvenations by Christina Poulos

Who hasn't heard of the Atkins or South Beach diet? The media has kept low carbohydrate diets in our faces over the past few years, with testimonials and instructions on how to cut out carbs and get thin quick. Some have found short term success in their attempts to ban sugar and carbs from their everyday lives, whereas others have continued to battle with bread, hopping on and off their diets every few weeks, desperately trying to lose the weight that they regained-over and over again. Some scary facts about low carb living are kidney damage, heart disease, cancer and osteoporosis.

The first carb-controlling diet we were introduced to was the Atkins diet. Steaks and Caesar salads are the first things that pop into my mind when I think of this diet. Dr. Atkin's theory was that hypersensitivity and over consumption of carbs resulted in weight gain. He instructed us to eat no more than 40 grams of carbs a day (20 grams for the first few weeks), along with unlimited amounts of sugar-free fatty foods, like bacon, red meat, and cheeses. By following this high protein plan, the body enters a fat burning phase called ketosis, and it's common to lose up to 15 pounds during the first 2 weeks. Eating eggs and bacon every morning and steak every night can sound very appealing, which is why many swear by the Atkins diet for short-term weight loss. While following the Atkins diet plan you must also cut out fruit, and you're limited to no more than 3 cups of low carb veggies per day.

Dr. Agatston of Miami developed The South Beach diet for his chronically overweight heart patients. The first few weeks of this diet are similar to the Atkins diet, and 8-13 pounds can be lost during the beginning phase. You cannot eat bread, fruit, rice, sugar, alcohol, potatoes, or baked goods. The foods you are encouraged to eat are chicken, turkey, and fish; all high in protein, but low in fat. On the South Beach diet you are actually encouraged to eat vegetables, which is why this diet is considered heart healthy.

Here's something we must all understand: not all carbohydrates are created equal. Simple carbs like white bread and sweets are rapidly digested, and make you feel hungry again very quickly. Then there are complex carbohydrates such as whole grain breads, fruits, and vegetables, which will make one feel fuller longer, because they take more time to digest. So why are we cutting out these healthy foods, even if it is for a short period of time? Weren't we taught to eat our veggies?

If you cut carbohydrates from your diet, you'll drop a few pounds, but as soon as you start eating them again, you're likely to gain all the weight back, and maybe even more! I've seen many Atkins enthusiasts binge on carbs after being deprived for so long. After going without breads for an extended period of time, your body can be "carb sensitive," so packing on the pounds is likely when re-introducing carbs into your diet.

You may believe that eating protein will be beneficial to your muscles. Actually, if there are no carbs entering your system, your body will use all the protein you are ingesting for energy. Protein is used for muscle and tissue growth, which is why low carb diets can make your muscles flat and less dense.

A low carb diet can actually slow your metabolism. When your fat levels and body weight drop too low, particularly in people that over-exercise and under-eat, your body ends up burning fewer calories. You will lose weight when first attempting to go off the carbs, but it will consist of mostly water weight. Three to five grams of water accompany every gram of carbohydrate. The bad news is that when you start eating carbs again, your body will feel bloated, as it retains excess water.

I must admit that I cannot look at a slice of bread or a bagel without shuddering. Many food companies are developing low carb versions of our favorite snacks and sodas, in an effort to help us with our continued fight against carbs. Are we now going to extremes, by changing our lifestyles so drastically? What happened to eating in moderation and exercising regularly to maintain a healthy weight? Educate yourself. Learn how to make healthy choices, and you'll live a healthier life.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

What is happening west of the canal? Sometimes we forget to ask. Sometimes we forget it is part of the Hamptons. In most people's minds, the Hamptons begin somewhere after you pass over Shinnecock Canal. Even though the towns that precede it may bear the actual title "Hamptons" explicitly in their name such as Westhampton or Hampton Bays it lies unspoken in the mind of many that the Hamptons truly begin once you pass over the canal that splits the island in two. The area includes Quogue, Quiogue, Westhampton, Westhampton Beach, Remsenburg, Hampton Bays, Flanders, Eastport and if we are really pushing it, all of the Moriches. Let's face it, there is a stigma. It is amazing what a few square miles can determine.

Meadowcroft in Quiogue

But in the past few years, the area, particularly Westhampton and Westhampton Beach, has reinvented itself and is trying harder each year (quite successfully) to pull away from the "party town" label its summer renters on Dune Road have given it by introducing more culturally based events each season in the form of community events and gatherings such as a concert series in their new amphitheater. Towns like Remsenburg and Quiogue are considered the upper echelon and have always separated themselves from the rest of the area. And, rightfully so. Remsenburg is one of the quaintest villages on the entire East End and the historic estates and mansions in Quiogue can rival the best of them.

The real estate boom has no less effect on this area than any other part of the Hamptons. Values here have tripled over the past few years and continue to remain strong. The other factor to explain why this area is currently thriving and changing is that buyers and summer renters that could once afford properties east of Shinnecock may no longer be able to do so. For example, a few years ago you could rent a Southampton oceanfront in the neighborhood of $125,000 give or take a few tens of thousands, for the season. Today the same rental may be upwards of $300,000. A Westhampton oceanfront rental is about $125,000 a season on the average. And unless salaries have tripled over the last few years, which they have not, those who may have been looking in East or Southampton may be taking their interests to another direction. Dare I say west, to find property?

The truth is that there are some stunning pieces of real estate throughout the area and the property values are nothing to sneeze at. In fact land here has been drawing some staggering numbers. Two parcels in Westhampton sold for $9 million each just a few months ago. Realtors in the area told me earlier this season that there were not enough summer rentals to go around, particularly homes on the oceanfront in the $125,000 and up range. It seemed everyone was looking for the same thing.

In other real estate news, a 122-acre parcel of land has been purchased in Montauk for $16.5 million. The area known as Amsterdam Beach will become Long Island's 34th state park. The property funds were raised jointly by county, state and the federal government. Contrary to what most believe, almost three quarters of the land in Montauk has been preserved. The Amsterdam Beach land runs from Montauk Highway toward the Point, just west of the Andy Warhol Preserve in an area called the Montauk Moorlands. Fifty-two of the acres are made up of delicate wetlands and rare grasslands filled with marine life. The save is a great victory for environmentalists.

And in Water Mill, the Order of the Sisters of St. Dominic has still not accepted a final bid for the 14-acre estate and mansion on Mecox Bay. The historic property has been the subject of a bidding war that has lasted for weeks and drawn bids well over the asking price. So far, a sale has not been finalized.

BUY THE LOAN BEFORE THE HOME!

Ready to buy a home? More to the point, ready to finance a home? Begin by finding the right lender, using these guidelines to make a wise choice.

The biggie is the interest rate, and whether variable or fixed. If variable, determine when you can lock it in and if it will cost you anything to do so. If you have excellent credit, you should get the lowest rate offered.

Establish what points you will pay, and if there is any penalty for prepayment. A "point" equals one percent of the loan's value, and when paid up front, can reduce your overall interest rate. Sometimes accepting a prepayment penalty also allows you to negotiate a lower rate.

Get quotes for closing costs and minimum down payment. The more you can pay down the better, but expect to pay 5 to 20 percent of the purchase price. Closing costs include appraisals, recording fees and more, but the lender should provide a "good faith estimate" of all out-of-pocket expenses.

Ask how long it will take to process your application, and what factors might cause delay. A lender may say two weeks, but 45 to 60 days is a more realistic time frame. Provide the required documentation and let the lender know of any changes during the process.

Compare lenders before you start comparing homes, and experience a happier purchase!

If you are thinking about purchasing a property in Palm Beach, use the best! With over 20 years of real estate experience, my personalized service and attention to detail guarantees that you will find the property that precisely fits your needs. CLUB TROUBLE
Dear Dan,

I have a great idea, along the lines of your Tough on Group Renters in Southampton story in the 5/27 issue, with respect to our "clubs" that insist on "partying" until daylight.

In a like manner, permits should be obtained by these "clubs" from any and all Town agencies impacted by this rude and obnoxious behavior, and the following rules/codes/laws should be adopted by the town:

1.Names/addresses/phone and cell phone numbers of the "club" owners so that the Town AND the public can call them at 4 a.m. and ask their staff to turn the "music" DOWN, and leave it DOWN!

2. Addresses and tax map numbers of each "club" so that the town/public can file an expedited claim with the NYSLA (or anyone else) when necessary.

3.The number of people in the "club", and their names and addresses, so that the Fire Marshall can write any overcrowding summonses in a more efficient fashion.

4.Any floor plan of the "club" showing all exits, so that the SHTPD can observe any "allegedly" intoxicated persons heading for their cars.

5.A contract between the Town and the "club" owners, requiring the "club" to remove garbage from surrounding private property and streets; and to be done and billed by the Town if this is not done within twenty-four hours of a complaint.

6.An agreement with the Town to a restriction against vehicle parking by "club" attendees on public and private property.

7.An affidavit signed by each owner, this if they do not abide by the above rules/codes/laws, they will accept any penalties meted out by any Town agency involved.

Of course, this is all hypothetical, because I am informed that, thanks to a New York state court ruling, two or more people must sign an affidavit to prosecute just a noise complaint (!). I can imagine the field day this court would have when the "clubs" started screaming about the "unconstitutional" rules above.

But the point is, aren't we town residents entitled to our own "constitutional" peace and quiet, and our quality of life to be enjoyed "year round" instead of just September to May? I think it is time for the current administration to keep up with their tough stance on these issues. As the Village of Westhampton Beach did by shutting down the former "Marakesh" club, it can (and should) be done.

Lloyd Booth

WATCH WHERE YOU DROP THAT THING
Dear Dan,

There are currently two proposals before the State Legislature that address litter and recycling. One expands the bottle law, places a deposit on every beverage product except wine and milk, and will force consumers to take back more than 200 types of containers to the grocery store if they want their money back.

The other simply repeals the bottle deposit law, allows beverage waste to be recycled at curbside where it should be, and imposes a small tax on all commercial litter generators to help municipalities recycle and dispose of litter.

The first proposal will result in nothing more than higher beverage prices and dirty grocery stores. The second is consumer friendly and consistent with curbside recycling that didn't exist when the bottle law was first enacted.

Everything changes and so should the bottle law. New York consumers don't need to be financially penalized to recycle. Given the chance, we can do it at the curb just like forty other states!

I urge citizens to call their legislators and tell them to support bills A.8522/S.5500 and bring recycling in New York into the 21st Century.

POWER DOWN
Dear Dan,

Can you find out why the residents of Noyac are continually subjected to the barrage of low-flying helicopters that are for the exclusive use of a chosen few? The number of helicopters has risen to where the noise of one has not faded before the next one is overhead. I understand the pilots are instructed to follow the power lines, yet more often than not they are far north of this mark. We can certainly understand the rush to be out here, but our quality of life is now being determined and destroyed by those who seek the same quality of life. In light of the recent crashes in Manhattan this past week, a solution to this growing hazard, both for safety's sake and quality of life, must be reached soon. Thank you.

Jill and Claude Grosjean

Police Blotter

Picture Perfect Petty Crime

The career plans of a teenage photographer from Sag Harbor were thwarted when he was caught red handed by police at 5:40 a.m. with a camera that had been reported stolen hours earlier. While riffling through a stranger's car on Denison Road, the young man gained an immediate interest for visual arts after finding an expensive camera in the glove compartment. When police approached the budding photojournalist, he claimed to be the next best thing to Ansel Adams before attempting a daring escape on foot. A block later, the police had the teenager under arrest and charged him with criminal possession of stolen property in the fifth degree, resisting arrest, and obstruction of governmental administration. He is also under investigation for several other crimes that recently took place on Denison Road, including pulling flowers and breaking a basketball hoop. I guess local residents and town police just don't understand the up and coming genius and his bizarre recreational activities.

Gang Wars Rage On

In an attempt to solidify control of the area, a local gang ransacked a house on Toppings Path in Sagaponack and spray painted their name and location all over the walls. The "Turner Bloods" from "Hampton Court" are obviously huge fans of the new hit reality show "Growing Up Gotti," because they wrote "Gotti Boys for Life" all over the house.

The illicit "Turner Bloods" successfully stole enough furnishings to redesign their gang headquarters with two televisions, a washer and dryer, gas stove, some silverware, four doors and an outdoor light from the unsuspecting Sagaponack resident's home.

Brawling for Beer in 7-11

A 22-year-old-man from Dix Hills was so insulted when a clerk at 7-11 on North Sea Road refused to sell him beer that he jumped over the counter and punched him in the face. The angered alcoholic was arrested shortly after, and will most likely be issued a restraining order that prevents him from stepping within 50 yards of the convenience store. So much for late night slurpies and day old egg sandwiches!

Who Needs to Hear?

During their ongoing effort to leave the entire town of Sag Harbor deaf, the restaurant/bar 21 Water played such loud music that it attracted local police officers eager to participate in the ear damaging disco party. The sound polluter formerly known as "Rocco's" received four village code violations for excessive noise, which helped them reclaim their title of being the loudest watering hole in the Hamptons. Apparently, next weekend the bass will be bumping at even higher decibels and representatives from hearing aid manufacturers will be presenting the latest in-ear amplification technology.

Going the Full Monty

A Hampton Bays man spent the weekend showing off his private parts to complete strangers. The 27-year-old exhibitionist is extremely proud of his endowment and thought he might land a girlfriend or role in an adult film by showing it off to unsuspecting shoppers in Bridgehampton. After baring all more than four times in front of the same store, police finally arrested the aspiring stripper on Montauk Highway and charged him with public lewdness. Hopefully he will find someone more appreciative of his self-proclaimed prize "package" at Riverhead Penitentiary.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpecting motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an ellipitical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.

My Name is "Hooper". I have been waiting at Kent Animal Shelter for a long time for someone to take me home. I am a 4 year old boy who has been neutered and vaccinated. I am told I am not that special looking, but I think I am rather handsome. I am a Lab/Shep cross, a bigger dog but I am very calm. They keep calling me a big couch potato. Please call Kent Shelter at 631-727-7797 and come take a look at me.
